A Wise Young Prince.
$1,000,000? Not Enough.
Pluto Celebrates.
To Kill, or Not to Kill.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

WISE MAN is the young Prince of Wales, now traveling with his brother in South America to promote sales of British goods. Speaking of American methods he told fellow citizens and future subjects some time ago that they must learn to "adopt, adapt and improve" the best methods everywhere.

Now, opening a "British exposition" in Buenos Aires, the prince, complaining that the exhibition has not been sufficiently advertised, orders publicity experts to advertise the affair as an all-South American exhibition, and to advertise extensively.

Two things make success, first, having what the people want; second, letting them know, through advertising, that you have it. The prince knows that.

IT IS ANNOUNCED that G. W. Hill, as a bonus for his year's work as head of a great tobacco company, got $1,000,000 worth of stocks. His competitors, in that industry, will agree that he didn't get enough.

All business men are interested in the fact that Mr. Hill's extraordinary success is based on the fact that he attends personally and in minutest detail to DISTRIBUTION which means ADVERTISING.

The problem of production has been solved. The big eternal problem that will endure forever is that of distribution, that of SALESMANSHIP. Anybody can MAKE cigarets—not everybody can sell them by the millions.

THE NEW planet, Pluto, now celebrates the first anniversary of its discovery by earth dwellers, which probably makes little difference to Pluto's inhabitants, if there are any. Its birthday would violently interest the late Dr. Percival Lowell, distinguished astronomer, who announced Pluto's existence, and foretold its position in the heavens, as Halley, long ago, foretold the return of the comet named for him.

The comet came back after Halley was dead, and Pluto was discovered after Lowell was dead.

PLUTO, THE ninth in our solar family of planets, is about as big as this earth. Its year lasts 250 of our years, since it takes that long a time to go around the sun. It is traveling more than two miles a second now, and soon will be going at the rate of three miles a second, which makes the recent automobile speed record of four miles a minute seem small.

It was Clyde Tombaugh, a Kansas farm boy, who first found Pluto, a creditable performance, for the planet is 3,800,000,000 miles from the sun, 40 times as far as the earth from the sun.

AFTER 61 YEARS without executing a criminal, Kansas prepares to restore capital punishment. Criminals have brought this upon themselves with too many murders.

But Kansas will let juries decide on capital punishment or life imprisonment. It is not probable that many juries would vote for death.

In Michigan, after more than 100 years without infliction of the death penalty, a referendum will decide on restoring death. The Legislature has approved funds for an electric chair. Why not buy a rope if the state must imitate the murderer? It costs less and, unlike the electric chair, it is not an insult to science.

MR. SINCLAIR LEWIS was to lecture in Constitutional Hall, Washington, D. C., but the Daughters of the American Revolution would not let him have the hall. They do not approve of him.

The title of Mr. Lewis' lecture is "American Literature Comes of Age," and the lecture would interest several now deceased, Oliver Wendall Holmes, Emerson, Longfellow, Poe and Hawthorne.

TROUBLE BETWEEN Arabs and Jews continues in Palestine, Britain, changing its interpretation of the "White Paper" that caused so much discussion, annoys the Arabs, who retaliate by establishing a boycott on their Jewish neighbors, saying:

"Sell everything to the Jews but land. Buy nothing from them."

An Arab newspaper urges its readers to follow the example of Ghandi, and get rid of foreign-made clothing.

FREDERCIK BURR OPPER, able cartoonist, celebrated at a banquet on Wednesday the thirty-first birthday of his popular character, "Happy Hooligan," better known to millions of young Americans than many of the most distinguished characters in history.

President Hoover, Calvin Coolidge and others sent messages of congratulation and Mr. Opper deserves congratulations. His political cartoons since and before the days of "Willie and His Papa," have said what Opper thought, with absolute sincerity, but without arousing bitterness or hatred. He has made truth plain to millions.

"BIG BILL" THOMPSON, of Chicago, after 12 years in the mayor's office, knows that the world is a rough place and that you must speak the language of plain people. Says he:

"So now Jimmie Walker is getting the push-around. Well, just say for me, he ain't seen nothing yet."

MAYOR THOMPSON takes a somewhat local view of New

Freedom until a jury trial next August today seemed assured for Mrs. Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger, held at Nice, France, in the slaying of her husband.

BEAUTY MAY WIN BAIL IN SLAYING

French Judge Says Widow Of Nixon-Nirdlinger Will Face Trial for Murder

By FREDERIC K. ABBOTT
International News Service.

NICE, France, March 14.—Definite indication that prison doors will swing open soon for Mrs. Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger, former St. Louis beauty queen, whose wealthy husband was slain in their fashionable villa here, was given today by Magistrate Vachier, in charge of investigation into the tragedy.

The magistrate, who will begin his questioning of the Philadelphia theater magnate's young widow Wednesday, said, after a perusal of police testimony:

"Regardless of developments, which might be in her favor, Mrs. Nixon-Nirdlinger must face a jury trial next August, as specified by law here in connection with a violent death.

"But very probably she will be released on bail as soon as public opinion has quieted."

STILL IN JAIL INFORMALLY

The police inquiry conducted into the slaying has been completed, and a full report has been turned over to Magistrate Vachier.

Mrs. Nixon-Nirdlinger, meanwhile, is being held in jail informally. Under French law a person cannot be released on bail if formally charged with murder.

Mrs. Nixon-Nirdlinger remained unshaken in her story today that she fired to save her own life from his jealous fury.

Evidence has since been uncovered in the Nixon-Nirdlinger villa on the fashionable Promenade Des Anglais tending to support her version of the slaying.

PICTURE FOUND

The young widow's strongest point of defense continued to be her claim that domestic affairs had reached the stage where her own life was jeopardized by her husband's constant jealous rage. A fully-loaded revolver owned by the dead man, and a drawing depicting him levelling a revolver at his wife were found in the villa by police. On the reverse side of the drawing was written:

"As you sow, so shall you reap."

MOTHER TO SAIL

ST. LOUIS, March 14.—(AP.)—Answering an appeal from her daughter, Mrs. Charlotte Nash Nixon-Nirdlinger, to "come to me at once," Mrs. James N. Nash today prepared to leave here for Nice, France, where the "Miss St. Louis" of 1923 is held in the fatal shooting Wednesday night of her wealthy husband.

DIVORCE PLAN

LOS ANGELES, March 14.—(AP.)—Frederick G. Nixon-Nirdlinger planned to divorce his third wife, Charlotte, who is being held at Nice, France, in connection with his death, Mrs. Harry McKenna, a sister of the slain man, said here today.

Mrs. Laura B. Nixon-Nirdlinger, his second wife, who lives at Coronado, Cal., said reports of a reconciliation between her and her former husband were "too personal to discuss."

HOOVER SEES FARM LOSS JUSTIFIED

President Says $50,000,000 Not Too High for U. S. To Pay for Stabilization

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

WASHINGTON, March 13.—President Hoover takes the view that even an ultimate loss of $50,000,000 would not be too high a price for the country to pay for the emergency agricultural stabilization operations of the Federal Farm Board, it was officially learned today.

The chief executive feels that, in supporting wheat and cotton prices during interludes of panicky weakness last year, Alex Legge and his former associates on the Farm Board averted an economic debacle in the agricultural regions, giving a breathing spell to banks and other creditors and thus perhaps averting 1,000 bank suspensions in the farm belt. Recognizing that liabilities were incurred by such bold experimental operations with public funds, Mr. Hoover believes that the maneuvers to peg agricultural staples made orderly liquidation possible, saving the farm regions from wholesale bankruptcies and foreclosures.

DUMPING AVERTED

If late in 1930 wheat had been permitted to break 70 cents a bushel, it was felt in administration quarters that the banks in farm regions would have been compelled at that stage to dump wheat which was held as collateral for loans, which had been arranged when the commodity was quoted at substantially higher prices. By stabilizing the market and boosting Chicago prices as much as 35 cents a bushel above the Liverpool parity, the Farm Board averted the necessity for widespread dumping of the staple on the market, as a result of banking pressure.

In other words, the government in effect gave an intangible subsidy to farmers, banks, and others who were "long" of wheat during this period, providing an air

REGIME BRINGS STEADY TAX INCREASE; CHECK ON FILES MYSTERY

Records of Two Offices Scanned

Procedure and methods of both the controller's office and the Department of Supplies, as well as the audit of records in these departments, are being scanned by the Citizens' Committee auditors, it was learned today.

Why this double check is being made could not be ascertained, but it is presumed that the search is for the purpose of determining the legal aspects of some of the actions.

TEST CASE LIKELY

It was also learned that the recent purchase bids of rugs for the office of Mayor Charles H. Kline forms a basis, those interested in the audit consider, for a test case to determine the right of City Council to pass an ordinance for payment of bills without bids.

According to prominent legal authorities, the Wallace act of 1874, under which Council has been proceeding, gives that body certain rights to provide payment of bills only in emergencies. Attorneys are of the opinion that the purchase of these rugs cannot be classed as an emergency.

COUNCIL FLAYED

Assistant District Attorney William R. Colvin today continued his private interviews with persons volunteering information on alleged irregularities in the city Department of Supplies.

Colvin has promised to keep secret the identity of those furnishing information. He is in personal charge of the district attorney's part of the investigation and audit of records of the Department of Supplies.

SCORES COUNCIL METHODS

Council has failed, Mrs. J. O. Miller, chairman of the league, declared yesterday, to give careful consideration to budgets and other matters. She said league members were scanning minutes of councilmanic meetings to analyze Council's actions on sale of city property, releases on tax liens and similar matters.

So far, she pointed out, records have been examined only for six months of 1930, but she declared these have shown a reorganization is necessary.

Expenses Mount In Kline Term

The annual budget of the city for 1931 is $28,747,626, an increase of $5,996,914 over 1927, when Charles H. Kline signed his first appropriation bill as mayor.

This increase amounts to 26 per cent, a load which has been carried by the taxpayers in a steadily increasing tax rate.

The increase in the cost of government has come at a time when the cost of living in Pittsburgh has decreased steadily, according to the report of the United States Department of Labor.

TAX RATE RISE

The tax rate, since 1927, has gone from 22.4 mills to 26 mills on land and from 11.2 mills to 13 mills on buildings.

Mayor Kline was inaugurated January 4, 1926. The budget for that year was closed two days previously and signed by Mayor William A. Magee. It totaled $21,612,641.

In three years previous to that time the budget had increased altogether $2,000,000.

COSTS RISE UNDER KLINE

With the beginning of the Kline administration, it immediately began to climb. The budget for 1927 was $22,750,712, an advance of more than a million.

A gain of almost $3,000,000 occurred in 1928, when the budget approved by Kline was $25,311,780. There was little increase in 1929, the figure being $25,594,618, but in 1930 this was increased to $27,360,435.22.

The budget approved for this year shows a gain of more than $1,000,000 over last year. The tax rate this year remained the same as last, but in many wards assessments were increased, calling forth protests from hundreds of taxpayers.

MILLAGE ADVANCED

In 1927, the tax rate on land and buildings was held unchanged from the 1926 figures. In 1928 it was boosted 2.6 mills on land and 1.3 mills on buildings. In 1929 it was unchanged but in 1930 it was raised 1 mill on land and ½ mill on buildings.

The trend in both tax rates and assessments has been steadily higher. At budget sessions, civic organizations and real estate and building groups have protested, pleading for economies.

The cost of living, according to the latest government figures, has dropped rapidly since 1925. The general cost of living in Pittsburgh in December, 1925, showed an increase of 28.5 per cent over December, 1917. It has dropped steadily from 1925 until in December, 1930, it showed an increase of only 15.2 per cent over 1917.

Food and clothing are now considerably lower than in 1917 and much lower than in 1927. Rent, fuel and house furnishings have all dropped since 1927.

4 DOWNTOWN STORES ROBBED

Four Mary Lee candy shops in the downtown district were looted last night. Police reported that the robbers entered the shops at Fifth avenue and Market street, 425 Smithfield street, 930 Liberty avenue and 339 Penn avenue. At the Smithfield street store managers reported that between $300 and $400 was taken from a safe. At the Liberty avenue store the robber removed $65 from a safe. The amount taken from the other store was not announced.

The safe in the Penn avenue store was jimmied, but was not opened, according to Miss Adjie Jameson, district store manager.

Two armed robbers this morning held up and robbed the P. H. Butler Company store at 67 Beltzhoover street, according to police. M. C. Donald, manager, told police the robbers took $75 from a cash register.

Einstein Dodges Crowds in Germany

HAMBURG, Germany, March 14.—(AP.)—Prof. Albert Einstein came back to Germany today after his American trip, but went to great pains to outwit crowds which had gathered to welcome him.

A large crowd gathered to greet him last night when the boat train from Cuxhaven arrived, but he was not aboard. It developed today that he had spent the night aboard the Deutschland and disembarked here this morning.

DROWNS HER 2 CHILDREN, SELF

MATTAPOISETT, Mass., March 14.—(INS.)—State troopers today grappled in the sea for the bodies of Mrs. Adeline Allison, wealthy society matron, of Saylesville, R. I., and her two children, who were drowned here last night when the mother leaped with them from a wharf. A third child, a boy of 11, swam ashore.

Investigation was made to determine if the mother pushed the children into the sea and then leaped after them.

Wayne, the boy, told police his mother had brought him with Hope, 6, and Dewight, 3, to the ocean side to watch liners pass late yesterday. He said while they were peering in the gloom, they were pushed off the wharf. The boy, who learned to swim last summer, said he managed to struggle to shore. He was discovered later shivering with fear and cold.

Mrs. Allinson was the wife of William Chester Allinson, owner of a bleachery company at Saylesville. He said his wife had been despondent, but had never threatened to take her life.

1 Missing, 4 Hurt In Boat Collision

NEW YORK, March 14.—(AP.)—One man was missing and four were in hospitals after the Mutual Towing Line tug Britannia and the American Diamond Line steamer, Coahoma County, from Rotterdam, crashed in the North River.

Raymond Bristoe, an oiler on the tug, was believed drowned, while the remainder of the seven-man crew was rescued.

Pershing Enraged By Foch Order

Attempts by Marshal Foch to limit objectives of the first offensive launched by an American army enraged Gen. Gen. Irwin Buried With Full Honors

WEST POINT, N. Y., March 14.—(AP.)—Guns boomed a soldier's farewell as Maj. Gen. George Leroy Irwin, former commander of the Panama Canal Division, was buried with full military honors in the post cemetery beside his father, Brig. Gen. B. J. D. Irwin, who died in 1917.

The Rev. A. B. Kinsolving, chaplain of the Military Academy, conducted the services.

J. P. Morgan Sails, May Join Prelate

NEW YORK, March 14.—(AP.)—J. P. Morgan sailed for England on the White Star liner Olympic for the reported purpose of picking up the Archbishop of Canterbury for a Mediterranean cruise that may include a visit to Palestine.

Morgan was accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. George Nichols.

Where to Wear Faces, Women's Latest Problem

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

We saw Mrs. Petelle get her face lifted in public on Thursday.

Indicating that women ain't sure just where they want their faces nowadays.

Doctors can now make a couple of slices above the ears, take off a face and then put it back upside down.

Mrs. Petelle's reason for the plastic butchery was that she wanted to play young mothers in the movies.

We think it would be much easier to get your neck shortened or to buy seven canes and play old grandpops.

Five women fainted during the mobile surgery.

We reached that stage in flitting expressions where you

BABY ILL, SEEK MOTHER

While authorities of Western Pennsylvania counties are searching for Mrs. Mary Namod, 24, of Nemacolin, Greene County, her 2-year-old son, Russell, lies ill in the family home, crying for his parent. The woman disappeared 11 days ago, without giving any reason to her husband or to her brothers and sisters who reside in the same community.

Her husband, Barm Namod, has appealed to police to aid him in the search. He believes that his wife may have gone away with another woman who left the community at the same time and now she is afraid to return. He wants her to know that she will be welcomed back.

In addition to Russell, the couple have another son, Abraham, aged 7.

Nathan to Testify In O'Neill Suit

NEW YORK, March 14.—(INS.)—George Jean Nathan, critic, was scheduled to be among the first witnesses examined Monday when trial of the suit of Georges Lewys against Eugene O'Neill is resumed in Federal Court. The redheaded writer is asking $2,000,000 damages from the playright, charging that he used material from her writings in one of his stage successes.

The playright, who is in France, through a deposition, said he had never seen or heard of Miss Lewys' works.

Mellon Wins Horse Race In England

HURST PARK, England, March 14.—(AP.)—Alike, owned by the American, R. K. Mellon, today won the Four-mile Handicap Steeplechase from a fine field of Grand National candidates, which included six other American-owned horses.

Drin, one of the favorites for the classic, was second, and the American, M. D. Blair's, Greatspan was third.

Judge Scores Jury For Rum Acquittal

WESTON, W. Va., March 14.—A Circuit Court jury here acquitted Thomas Crawford of violating the prohibition law, despite testimony of officers that they had found liquor on him when he was arrested at a football game. Judge Birk S. Stathers rebuked the jury for its findings.

Mueller's Condition Slightly Improved

BERLIN, March 14.—(AP.)—Condition of former Chancellor Hermann Mueller, who is seriously ill in a hospital here, was said today not to be greatly changed from yesterday afternoon when he showed a slight improvement.

Last of 6 Sisters Inheriting 100 Millions Dies Recluse

NEW YORK, March 14.—(AP.)—Miss Ella V. von E. Wendel, 80, last of the Wendel sisters who inherited the vast fortune of John Gottlieb Wendel, died in her sleep last night.

The simple announcement said merely that she had "died during the night."

Miss Wendel finished her days in the red brick mansion which stood through the years in Fifth avenue—now amid towering office buildings—as a monument to the family motto:

"Buy, but never sell real estate."

There were six daughters and a son in the family to inherit the $100,000,000 fortune which John Wendel started in fur as a contemporary of John Jacob Astor.

The son, John Gottlieb Wendel, Jr., became head of the family upon the death of his father. He frowned on marriage for his sisters, and decreed they should stay out of society, live in the simplest possible style, and wear the fashions of their youth.

2 Bids Identical, Dunlap Flips Coin to Decide

Col. W. R. Dunlap, newly-appointed city supplies director, awarded his first contract by the flip of a coin, he announced today.

Two bids to supply lumber needed by the city for March were identical. Calling in John Lang, chief clerk of the department, and other witnesses, Dunlap tossed the coin and when "heads" showed, he gave the contract to the Hill Top Lumber Company. The other bidder was the Williams Lumber Company.

Dunlap announced he had called a halt on the practice of salesmen making a headquarters of the supplies department offices. Beginning Monday doors will be locked, and only those who have business to transact will be admitted, he said, continuing:

"This office is a business institution, and not a country store, as some salesmen and others may think. Those who have business will be met by Chief Clerk Lang or myself. No one else will interview the salesmen. Those who have legitimate business are welcome. The doormat is in for all others."

There will be no changes in office personnel, Dunlap declared.

MORGAN, POWER INTERESTS BID FOR DEMOCRAT CONTROL

OWEN YOUNG CHOICE FOR PRESIDENT

Raskob Apparently Has Been Won to His Support; May Find Fight in Roosevelt

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Recent political developments have shown clearly that a strong effort is being made by the reactionary wing of the Democratic party to control the next Democratic presidential nomination.

The Democratic party has been during the greater part of its career a popular party, with the objective defined by Jefferson of "the greatest good of the greatest number."

The Republican party of late years has been the ultra-conservative party.

There is, however, a considerable likelihood that the unpopularity of President Hoover, due to the financial depression and partly to other circumstances, may result in the defeat of the Republican party at the polls in the next presidential election.

SHREWD POLITICS

It is shrewd politics, therefore, on the part of the Morgan interests and the power trust and other great banking and industrial corporations to try to control the Democratic convention and to win the nomination of a Democratic reactionary favorable to their policies.

The situation has been made more acute by the Progressive assembly here in which the Progressives, while they did not read themselves out of the Republican party, nevertheless took a very definite stand in opposition to President Hoover's power trust inclinations and declared that the country needed another Roosevelt.

Whether the spirit of the convention merely was that the country needed another man with progressive tendencies of Theodore Roosevelt, or whether the intimation was more directly leveled at the Roosevelt who occupies the gubernatorial chair in the state of New York, has been the subject of much discussion.

ROOSEVELT POSSIBILITY

It is not difficult to conceive the Progressives following Franklin D. Roosevelt as they followed Theodore Roosevelt, and so adding greatly to the strength of the Democratic party.

Alarmed at this, the reactionary interests and the reactionary politicians have brought Owen D. Young to the front as their particular candidate.

The Morgan interests are particularly enthusiastic for Mr. Young.

And the power interests are also vigorous supporters of him.

Apparently Mr. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, has been won to the support of Mr. Young.

Mr. Raskob's associations have always been with the great industrial interests, so he naturally would be inclined to support their favorite candidate.

KAUFMANN SEES HOOVER ON JOBS

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Edgar J. Kaufmann, Pittsburgh department store magnate, left here early this morning for home after a flying trip, in which he spent yesterday here, the night in New York and then returned to this city to spend only an hour before leaving for Pittsburgh.

While in this city he called at the White House, being introduced to President Hoover by United States Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania. Mr. Kaufmann and the President talked of plans for unemployment relief in Pittsburgh and also introduced his friend, Dr. Hugo Lucas, of Vienna, noted specialist on child diseases.

Mr. Kaufmann had luncheon at the Senate restaurant as the guest of Senator Davis, meeting a number of members of the upper house of Congress. In the afternoon, before leaving for New York, he and Dr. Lucas visited the Austrian minister to the United States, Edgar L. G. Prochnik.

BANK CASHIER KILLS SELF

YOUNGSTOWN, O., March 14.—(AP.)—Worried over ill health and the death of his brother and mother, Harry Williams, 61, cashier of the Commercial National Bank, shot and killed himself, bank officials said.

Williams was seen to go to the directors' room on the fourth floor, according to witnesses.

Employes in the floor below heard a noise as of a shot. Preston Williams, a son of the cashier, rushed to the director's room and found the body of his father. A revolver was lying nearby.

L. B. McKelvey, a director, said Williams had been worried for a long time regarding his health and had suffered a nervous breakdown.

COURT MAY GET TOWN HALL BOND CASE

McGovern Refusal to Sign Authorization Presents Legal Cloud on Validity

The courts probably will have to clear the issue raised by County Commissioner C. C. McGovern's refusal to join his colleagues, Joseph G. Armstrong and Edward V. Babcock in signing authorization for the sale of bonds to buy property for the proposed Town Hall on the site bounded by Fifth avenue, Ruskin avenue, Bigelow boulevard and Tennyson avenue.

In 1928, the people voted approval of a $6,000,000 bond issue to finance the erection of a Town Hall and after two and one-half years' delay, Armstrong and Babcock agreed to buy the proposed Oakland site of 140,400 square feet for $1,123,200, or about $8 a foot. McGovern declared the commissioners were offered an attractive site adjacent to the Oakland one for $2 a square foot.

Two weeks ago, on the eve of Babcock's departure for a vacation in Florida, he and Armstrong signed a statement of indebtedness authorizing the sale of bonds totaling $1,500,000 for the purchase of land and the cost of preliminary engineering expenses.

FIGHTS HIGH COST

McGovern refused to sign and in response to questions yesterday gave his reasons. He does not believe a Town Hall is necessary, but since the people voted for one he thinks it should be built on the county-owned property now occupied by the State Armory, Bayard and Thackery streets, on the city-owned old Exposition site or city-owned Monument Hill, North Side.

Concerning the Armory site, McGovern contends the county could build the necessary additional structure for $1,000,000 and be able to restore the remaining $5,000,000 to the people's credit.

McGovern asserted that the proposed Oakland site is the equivalent of 22 lots averaging about 60 by 120 feet, each of which would cost the city $51,055. He said "under the most favorable circumstances" those lots "might" sell as home sites at a maximum of $13,410 each.

DIFFER ON LEGALITY

Concerning the withholding of McGovern's approval, County Solicitor M. B. Iesher declared the bonds could be legally sold on the authority of the other two commissioners, according to an interpretation of Acts of the Assembly.

As regards a possible cloud on the validity of the bonds, there is a difference of opinion. Leading bankers and investment brokers said their bids on municipal bonds are subject to the approval of counsel, some of whom are stricter than others.

Attorneys said if three signatures were necessary and only two were obtained, the dissenting member could be forced through court action to sign the authorization for the sale of the bonds.

Georgia W. C. T. U. Opposes Roosevelt

MACON, Ga., March 14.—(AP.)—Mrs. Marvin Williams, state president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, said the W. C. T. U. will fight Franklin Roosevelt, the outstanding prospective candidate of the Democratic party, for the presidency. She said:

"Roosevelt can be thought of only in terms of wetness."

CLUB ASKS VETO OF JUDGE BILL

The Civic Club of Allegheny County has gone on record as opposed to the Coyne bill to create two additional judgeships in Allegheny County, which is awaiting the decision of Gov. Pinchot. Maurice R. Scharff, president of the Civic Club, wired Gov. Pinchot:

"The Civic Club of Allegheny County earnestly urges that you withhold approval from Coyne bill creating two additional judgeships in Allegheny County. Majority of Bar Association agree that these positions are unnecessary and we are convinced that entire proposal is political scheme fostered by local organization which is now under public investigation for visible irregularities and illegalities in local city government. We sincerely hope that you will not permit this scheme to succeed."

ARTS BUILDING DEDICATED

INDIANA, March 14.—The two-day professional conference that marked the dedication of the new Fine Arts Building of the Indiana State Teachers' College will end today with morning and afternoon sessions in the new building.

Speakers included Dr. J. N. Rule, acting state superintendent of public instruction; ex-Gov. John S. Fisher; Thomas Sutton, president of the board of trustees of the school; Dr. Ben G. Graham, superintendent of Pittsburgh schools, and the Rev. J. J. McIlvaine, pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Indiana.

Dr. C. R. Foster, president of the school, presided.

Today, following a luncheon in the college refectory, the conference will close with addresses by Dr. Elmer G. Miller, of Pittsburgh, director of commercial education; John G. Kirk, Philadelphia, director of commercial education, and H. A. Andruss, director of the Department of Commerce of the State Teachers' College at Bloomsburg, Pa.

Brewsters to Wed Again; File Notice

LOS ANGELES, March 14.—(AP.)—Eugene V. Brewster, former millionaire magazine publisher, and Corliss Palmer, stage and screen beauty, who feared their marriage, performed in Mexico, might be clouded by American court rulings, have filed intention to re-wed.

The one-time publisher, whose wealth was reputed in excess of $3,000,000 a few years ago, gave his age as 58, and his wife 25.

UTILITY QUIZ TOLD RATES WERE CUT

Witness Says Six Concerns Reduced Charges After Test by U. S. Trade Board

HARRISBURG, March 14.—(AP.)—The House committee investigating public utilities will continue its sessions Monday when reports on the Clarion River Power Company in 1925 and 1930 will be submitted.

It adjourned for the week-end yesterday after hearing complaints of high utility rates and stock pyramiding, and studying reports on the two-month period of February and March, 1930, during which the Public Service Commission obtained from its bureau of accounts data on 20 electric companies, and instituted inquiries into their rates.

"INQUISITORIAL"

With B. Frank Morgal, chief of the bureau, on the witness stand, Harold C. Evans, attorney for the committee, attempted to show that these "inquisitorial proceedings" were the result of disclosures before the Federal Power Commission and that from 1924 until 1930 the commission made no similar calls upon the bureau.

Morgal submitted a report showing the commission had directed the bureau to examine the books and accounts of the 20 companies and had filed formal complaints against four.

The remaining 16, he added, were inquisitorial proceedings, and all of them still are pending. The formal complaints were against the Scranton Electric Company, Edison Power and Light Company of New York, Abington Electric Company, and the Renovo-Edison Light, Heat and Power Company. They were filed on February 10, March 10, and two on June 10, 1930.

CITES RATE DECREASES

Asked if the occasion for the Scranton Electric examination was the disclosures that were made before the Federal Trade Commission in their examination of that company's accounts, Morgal said he had no reason to believe so.

The witness said the action of the commission had resulted in rate decreases by six companies, ranging from an annual drop of $750,000 in the revenue of the Scranton Electric to $900 in that of the Fulton Electric Company.

WATER CONTEST HEARING HERE

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 14.—(AP.)—Completing a calendar list of 35 cases, the State Superior Court adjourned to meet again in Pittsburgh the week of April 13.

The appeals of the Scranton-Spring Brook Water Service Company and its consumers from the order of the Public Service Commission of last December will be heard in Pittsburgh during the week of April 20. The commission granted the company $995,000 of its desired $1,500,000 rate increase and the company appealed from the decision. The consumers also filed an appeal, claiming the original rates were too high.

Pittsburgher Given State Revenue Job

HARRISBURG, March 14.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot's office yesterday announced the appointment of 12 persons to positions in the state's employ and the dismissal of five others. The list of appointees included Alonzo Delahunt, Pittsburgh, accountant, revenue department, salary $5,000; Robert R. McGeorge, New Castle, investigator, revenue department, salary $1,860.

Emergency Fund Voted For Turtle Creek

The operating committee of the Allegheny County Emergency Association met and appropriated money yesterday to cover labor costs on eight public projects to be instituted by Turtle Creek, the first step toward putting the Pittsburgh plan into operation outside the city. The actual work on the jobs will be started as early as possible, Maj. Philip Mathews, executive director of the association, stated.

Included in the Turtle Creek projects are three sewer jobs in James street, two of them trunk sewers, the third a sanitary sewer; the paving of Penn avenue from Shaw to Hunter streets; the building of a sewer on Cedar avenue; paving of Chestnut street to the borough line and paving Grant street from Maple avenue to new paving.

Residents of Turtle Creek will be hired for the work.

Legislation to provide purchase of materials totaling $92,000 for 12 improvement projects under supervision of the City Department of Public Works, with work to be done by men furnished by the Association, will be presented to City Council Monday. Most of the work planned is for improvement to playgrounds, entrances, retaining walls, abutments and curb guards. Estimated cost of the labor will be $139,000 with work being furnished for 796 men for several weeks on a three-day per week employment basis, Director Edward G. Lang of the Public Works Department said.

Four hundred and fourteen men registered for work at the five employment stations of the association yesterday. To date, a total of 4,213 registrations for work have been made. At the state employment bureau yesterday, 185 applications were filed. Other stations reported as follows: Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation, 35; Irene Kaufmann Settlement station, 69; North Side Ledger office, 76, and the East End station at 131 Collins avenue, 93.

Coolidge Hopes Liberals Learn How to Co-Operate

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., March 14.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

There is no need for hasty judgment on the Progressive's conference held in Washington. Many sincere people attended it. Their assumption that they are better than any of the political parties will do no harm. Apparently they have an ambitious program. They seek to guide all other public officers. Their official members have not always shown great capacity for co-operation. If they now learn to co-operate with each other they later may be able to co-operate with other members of the Congress.

Mr. Coolidge

The conference has accomplished little by naked criticism. Everyone knows that the government is not perfect. Almost everyone suspects that it will not be made perfect for some time. Yet we all want to see it improved. We all desire progress, prosperity and an even better distribution of the rewards of industry, although in these we now surpass the world. Very few now believe that these things can be secured by more extravagance, more loafing, more politics, or more government.

The discussion may prove helpful. A reduction of vague ideas to specific proposals usually shows whether they are sound. The formation of a constructive common sense program for perfecting the country will not be found easy.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM LARIMER MELLON, JR. . . . THE BEST PICTURE TAKEN OF THEM

MELLONS PLAN FOR FUTURE

The flurry of telephone calls and hasty visits from friends that attended their home-coming having subsided, William Larimer Mellon, Jr., and his bride, the former Miss Grace Rowley, today settled down to planning for the future.

They arrived here yesterday after a honeymoon since fall in Europe. Mellon, son of W. L. Mellon, is ready to continue his duties as clerk in the Mellon National Bank. The bride is looking forward to the time they will settle in their own home, possibly an apartment.

Mrs. E. H. Rowley, of 415 Glen Arden drive, mother of the bride, who was host to the couple at dinner last night, said they have yet to make their plans, commenting:

"Really, they are just as excited as two children. Plans for their future are yet to be made, but an apartment undoubtedly will be their choice. Mrs. Mellon enjoys home duties and responsibilities, but, of course, I cannot say if she wants to do her own cooking. She hasn't even said so. They will enjoy their own home, I am sure."

Jury Frees Autoist In Death of Boy

E. W. Davenport, 45, of Universal, was free today of a charge of involuntary manslaughter in connection with the death of Thomas P. Gulentz, 11, of Maple street, Universal, who was killed October 31 by an automobile. The jury which acquitted him in Criminal Court decreed that he should pay the costs of the trial. He claimed the accident was unavoidable.

$100,000 Willed To Jobless Man

DENVER, March 14.—(AP.)—John I. Show, unemployed and in modest circumstances, found cheer today in word he was heir to more than $100,000 from a $1,000,000 estate. The estate was left by Show's aunt, Mrs. Mary J. Paxton, widow of an Omaha, Neb., pioneer.

LONG-LOST SON FOUND IN JAIL

PORTSMOUTH, O., March 14.—(AP.)—A 20-year search ended here when Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Brazelton, of Kansas City, were reunited with their son, James Albert, 20, of Highland Bend, O.

Separated from her husband shortly after the son's birth, Mrs. Brazelton placed her baby in the care of a couple named Carter in Louisa, Ky. The mother, then only 16 years old, remained alone for 13 years, but finally became reconciled with her husband.

Setting out to find their son, the couple learned he had left the home of his guardians. Through friends they traced him to Portsmouth, where he was found in jail serving a 90-day term for breaking into a railroad tool house.

The parents told their story to Sheriff Maurice J. Caldwell who brought about the youth's release when the mother and father paid the costs. Young Brazelton, who had been using the name of Carter, returned with his parents to their home in Kansas City.

MOTHER PICKS LIFE FOR SON

BARDSTOWN, Ky., March 14.—(AP.)—The parting of the ways came today for two Detroit youths tried under the names of Frank Carson and Anthony Peterson for the murder of Carl B. James, Louisville, who was shot to death February 23, when he gave the two hitch-hikers a ride.

Carson was taken to the penitentiary at Eddyville to await electrocution, June 12. Peterson was taken to the Frankfort Reformatory to begin a life sentence.

After Carson's conviction, Peterson telephoned his mother in Detroit, Mrs. Constina Piotrowski, who advised him to plead guilty and accept a life penalty rather than run the risk of death in the electric chair by standing trial.

Mr. James was general development agent for the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, and former professor at Western Reserve University, Cleveland. His wife, who witnessed the killing, identified Carson as the one who fired the fatal shot.

AGED BANKER ALONE AT MANSION

Spouse Seldom at Home of Former Millionaire; He Awaits Coal Deal Close

UNIONTOWN, Pa., March 14.—J. V. Thompson's palatial mansion at Oak Hill will not have a mistress for some time to come.

This was made plain here today when friends of the aged banker declared they had been told that, for the present, the third Mrs. Thompson, who was Mrs. Rose Maloney, of Pittsburgh, would remain at her home and that Thompson would continue to make the Oak Hill estate his residence.

SELDOM AT MANSION

Neighbors of Mr. Thompson declare that, so far as they have seen, the new Mrs. Thompson has not visited the former multi-millionaire in recent months. They do not remember ever having seen her at the mansion, although it is possible that she could have escaped their observation had she motored to the Uniontown home.

It was indicated that for the present neither Thompson nor wife No. 3 would change their addresses. Plans for the future have not been fully discussed.

WORKS ON COAL DEAL

Uppermost in the mind of Thompson at present is the consummation of the huge coal deal from which he expects to derive many millions of dollars. The closing of this deal no doubt would be followed by definite retirement, and perhaps the establishment of a home with his wife.

At the present Thompson's sight does not seem greatly improved, although he says that he can see better since his operation in a Pittsburgh hospital. However, his sight is said to be causing him much annoyance.

The former banker has no hesitation in discussing his third matrimonial venture with friends. He has no definite plans for the future and much depends upon the outcome of the $30,000,000 coal deal now in the negotiation stage.

Two Men Arrested As Drunken Drivers

SHARON, Pa., March 14.—After his automobile had hit a sled on which two boys were riding, Joe Klopach, 21, was arrested on a charge of driving while drunk. While police were taking him into custody a large crowd gathered. Another autoist, Joe Pulchosky, 36, of Meadville, attracted attention of the police and they arrested him on a charge of driving while drunk. The boys were uninjured.

$66,956 Contracts Let for New School

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 14.—School directors of Somerset Township, Washington County, have let contracts, totaling $66,956, for erection and heating equipment of a new consolidated school, with eight classrooms, a combined auditorium and gymnasium, seating 400 persons, a community dining room and meeting room, and other unusual features.

NOTEDWRITER'S MOTHER DIES

Mrs. Anna C. M. Phillips, 78, mother of Sir Percival Phillips, former Pittsburgh newspaperman and well-known war correspondent, died in the West Penn Hospital yesterday after a short illness. Her son cabled from India last night, stating he will be unable to get home for a month. He is engaged in newspaper work in India.

Although Mrs. Phillips had been a patient at Hillsview Sanitarium, Washington, Pa., for four years, her death was unexpected. She was born in Brownsville, Pa. She was a granddaughter of David S. Knox and a niece of former United States Senator P. C. Knox. She attended the Brownsville Public School and taught music for many years. She was the widow of Dr. Herbert Phillips.

Sir Percival Phillips has made his home in London for more than 30 years, most of the time working as staff correspondent of the London Daily Mail. Mrs. Phillips also has two grandchildren. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Brownsville where funeral services are to be held.

STUART CANVAS REDISCOVERED

NEW YORK, March 14.—(Universal.)—A long lost masterpiece by the "father of American art," Gilbert Stuart, has just been rediscovered by the leading expert on Colonial painting, William Sawitzky, it was made known here today by the Babcock Galleries, present owners of the picture.

It is a portrait of Caleb Whitefoord, London merchant, friend of Benjamin Franklin and one of the negotiators of the peace treaty of 1782.

Painted in that year in London by Stuart and exhibited in the Royal Academy, the painting was in the next generation mistakenly attributed to Sir Joshua Reynolds and has passed as the work of that painter for a century.

It was being offered for sale as a Reynolds at the moment it was identified.

Man Shot in Fight, Suspect Arrested

Shot in the abdomen during a quarrel at his home, police say, Haskell Boyd, 49, a Negro, of 630 Second avenue, Homestead, was in Homestead Hospital today. John Sears, 24, a Negro, of 427 Third avenue, Homestead, was held by police in connection with the shooting.

Search 30,000-Acre Forest; Sales Agent Bares Secret Romance in Police Quiz

CHICAGO, March 14.—(AP.)—County highway police are searching a 30,000-acre forest preserve for Norma Newby, 36, in the belief she may have been kidnaped and slain.

The woman disappeared 11 days ago, but the story of her suspected fate did not come to light until yesterday when police began questioning Frank J. Murray, 47, a salesman, who said two robbers abducted him and the woman March 2, forcing him to drive his automobile to the preserve.

The robbers beat him into unconsciousness and took his car, he said.

Murray told the police he had been friendly with Miss Newby for 17 years, and that he had tried to terminate his friendship, but that the woman had threatened to cause him trouble by telling his wife.

William F. Collins, chief of the highway police, said he could not understand why Murray failed to report the woman's disappearance at the time of the reported abduction.

The police said records disclosed that Murray had gone to a hospital for treatment, telling of the robbery, but making no mention of Miss Newby. He said he said nothing about her because he was suffering from a temporary amnesia. He was not held.

IF YOU ARE one of many preparing to run for president in 1932, you will have an exciting time.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, expects at least four presidential candidates, two Republicans, President Hoover representing the regulars; some Progressive representing the "dissatisfied" element.

Democrats will unite behind a candidate advocating state control of prohibition. The Republicans will straddle prohibition and there will be prohibition presidential and vice presidential candidates, one from the South and one from the West.

ILL TWINS DRINK POISON IN PACT

CHICAGO, March 14.—(AP.)—Two twin brothers, 21 years old, doomed to a slow death as paralytic cripples, sat in wheel chairs in their home last night. Together they raised glasses containing liquid poison to their lips, and drank a toast to death.

For six months, Thomas and Stephen Hall had discussed their plans to pass into the beyond together, prompted by a mutual desire to end their own suffering and ease the burden they felt they had imposed on their family.

Only one thing held them off, and that was the hope that they some day might get well. Then came the medical edict—that they were incurables, and they felt the time had come to act.

The twins got possession of a slow-acting poison. Their mother was in the kitchen and they sent their sister, Eleanor, 10, and brother, Robert, 12, out of the room on invented errands, divided the potion and drank.

The mother found the twins collapsed in their chairs. They were taken to a hospital, where the poison was pumped from their stomachs. Doctors said they had a chance to recover from the poison but no hope was held out for relief from the disease that prompted their act.

Stephen said:

"Our mother was working herself to death for us."

Slain in Gun Fight On Crowded Street

GALVESTON, Tex., March 14.—(AP.)—One man was shot to death and another was seriously wounded here in a gun fight on crowded downtown streets, believed to have grown out of liquor smuggling operations.

Clarence "Ky" Gregory, 28, died in a hospital from bullet wounds. Mitchell "Michie" Frankovich, 31, was taken to a hospital in a serious condition. Theodore "Fatty" Owens and James "Jimmie" Crabb were released on $5,000 bond each on murder charges.

Unidentified Man Killed in Tunnel

The identity of a man, about 60, killed when struck by a train in the Etna tunnel of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad last night was being sought by morgue attaches today.

The victim, apparently a tramp, deputy coroners said, had been struck by an eastbound train. The body was found by a train crew.

Chaplin Denies 'Meddling' In Aid of German 'Reds'

BERLIN, March 14.—(AP.)—Charlie Chaplin today found himself unwillingly enmeshed in German political discussion.

The Young Guard, Communist youth organ, quoted the movie actor as declaring to its editor:

"My greetings and all my sympathies are with the Communist youth of Germany."

The Conservative Nationalist Boersenzeitung asserted that if the remark were true it constituted an an unwarranted meddling with Germany's internal affairs.

Chaplin denies having made any such statement.

Chaplin's secretary said that he believed the incident to have arisen from the visit of a delegation representing German unemployed in the stage and film fields. The actor expressed profound sympathy with their lot but pointed out that 100,000 American film people were also unemployed.

His secretary added:

"The word Communism was never mentioned. Charlie is no politician and never expresses political opinions."

Aviatrix Claims Record, Soaring 33,000 Feet

AKRON, O., March 14.—(AP.)—A business woman who is just as efficient in the air as in the office today claimed to have broken the women's altitude record by more than half a mile.

Miss Frankie Renner, 30, who ordinarily is known as secretary-treasurer of the Robbins Flying Service, took her Waco biplane up through a howling gale and numbing cold yesterday to a ceiling estimated by the weather bureau at 33,000 feet.

If calibration of her barograph at Washington sustains her claims, she easily will have surpassed the record of 30,064 feet claimed only eight days ago by Miss Ruth Nichols, of Rye, N. Y., society girl. Her airmeter stopped recording at 28,000 feet.

Miss Renner came down after four hours and four minutes showing little effects of her ordeal. She said:

"A couple of my toes froze, but after I was down a while they felt all right."

Her gums bled a little and her ears "crackled some" in the 50-below-zero weather she encountered.

Otherwise she had no trouble. The plane and motor worked so well she just set the controls and let it climb while she busied herself with calculations and notations. She carried a special oxygen supply and kept warm with three suits of heavy underclothing, two sweaters, two pairs of woolen stockings, a pair of moccasins, a flying suit and an oxygen helmet.

WILL SUIT WON BY CHURCH

Gifts aggregating $5,000 to churches and hospitals by the late Morris Rosenblum were upheld by Judge Harry H. Rowand in an opinion handed down in Common Pleas Court.

The court ruled that a life insurance trust created by Rosenblum three days before his death, in October, 1928, for the benefit of eight institutions, is not subject to the Act of 1855, amended by the Act of 1911, providing that charitable bequests must be contained in a conveyance executed at least one month before death.

The decision was found in an equity action brought by the Sacred Heart Church, left $500, joined in by the Passavant and Mercy hospitals, each left $250 through the trust fund, against the Fidelity Trust Company, executor of the estate. Other beneficiaries of the fund are: B'nai Israel Congregation, $2,000; Montefiore Hospital, $500, and Adath Heshuran Synagogue, $500; Jewish Home for Aged, $500, and Beth Shalom Congregation, $500.

SACRED HEART WINDOW BEGUN

Work has begun on filling with precious jeweled glass the third largest window in the world, the facade window of the Sacred Heart Church, Shady avenue and Walnut street. The window is 48 feet high and 26 feet wide. It will be completely glazed with stained glass, and is expected to be dedicated at Christmas time.

The window is to tell the story of the Catholic builders of the nation in discovery, explorations, development, defense and education. It will be an American window throughout, with American glass, designed by American artists and telling the story of America. At the peak of the window will be the American flag; below in the traceried openings will be the 48 stars of the various states; farther down will be the seals of the 13 original colonies. The borders of the mullions will be the stars and stripes, and the furled American flag. The decorative features will contain all flowers and fruits and products of the American soil.

BRANDON BOOTH LECTURES HERE FOR WEEK

Son of Volunteers' Head To Speak in Churches; Club Addresses Planned

Maj. Charles Brandon Booth, national extension secretary of the Volunteers of America, will tomorrow open a week's lecture engagement here. He will speak at morning services of the Bellevue Methodist Episcopal Church, and the evening service of the First Baptist Church, Bellefield avenue and Bayard street.

Next Wednesday night he will be the guest of the Mt. Lebanon Methodist Episcopal Church. His engagements for March 22 call for morning services in the Second Presbyterian Church, Eighth street, and the evening service of the First United Presbyterian Church of Sewickley.

Clubs will be addressed during the first week, Maj. Booth has announced. He is the son of Gen. Ballington Booth and Maud Ballington Booth, national commanders of the Volunteers of America. Local speaking arrangements are being made by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ives, of the Pittsburgh division of the Volunteers of America.

London's Wife Sues For Film Profits

LOS ANGELES, March 14.—(AP.)—Suit for accounting of receipts from the film "Smoke Bellew," taken from Jack London's book of that name, was filed in Superior Court yesterday by his widow against Columbia Pictures Corporation, to which film rights had been assigned by the Ralph W. Ince Corporation.

Mrs. London alleged that under a contract with Ince she was to get $10,000 and a percentage of profits, but that she had received no part of the profits.

Pre-Easter Program At Salvation Army

Subjects appropriate to the pre-Easter season, with programs of vocal and instrumental music, will characterize the week-end services of the Salvation Army. At the morning Holiness Service tomorrow and the evening Salvation meeting, Adjt. George Brooks will be the speaker. "The Hardest Lesson of All—Patience" will be the subject of the Sunday school lesson, and "Reasonable Tribute" will be discussed at the Young People's meeting.

Lecturer

MAJ. CHARLES B. BOOTH

Maj. Booth, national extension secretary, Volunteers of America, who tomorrow will open a week's lecture engagement in Pittsburgh churches.

TWO SERMONS GO ON AIR

"What Do We Know About Heaven?" will be the subject which the Rev. S. N. Hutchinson, of the East Liberty Presbyterian Church, will present tomorrow morning over Station KDKA. Music will be furnished by the church quartet.

The vesper services conducted by the Rev. Dr. E. J. Van Etten, of the Calvary Episcopal Church, will be broadcast over the same station tomorrow afternoon. Dr. Van Etten's subject will be "Thy Rebuke Hath Broken My Heart" and "Behold and See," both selections from Handel's "Messiah." Special music will be featured.

Pastor to Speak On Savorless Salt

"Salt Without Savor" will be the morning subject of the Rev. Dr. Charles C. Cribbs, of the First Presbyterian Church of Ingram. His evening subject will be "God's Boundless Mercy."

Alma Rubens Sought To Kill Doctor She Said Deceived Her

By ALMA RUBENS

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

I made up my mind that I owed something to the world—something to other poor girls, who might make the same dreadful mistake as I had made.

"I will take the remainder of this coke," I whispered to myself, "and by that time that doctor will be back in town. Then I will go and kill him, and kill myself, and leave my confession behind to let the world understand what a man like that means to poor weak, ignorant women who got to him for help."

Miss Rubens

But when I went to see the doctor on Monday morning and tried to speak to him about what he had done, he laughed and brushed the whole matter aside, as if it was all a rather stupid joke.

And before I left his office with a fresh supply of dope in my bag, I was persuaded that he was the best and the kindest, and the most considerate friend I had in the world.

Then he began to raise his prices, like all the rest.

He had me "hooked." I was at his mercy, and he made me pay, and pay, and pay, a hundred times over, for every whiff of cocaine he gave me. Finally his prices became so outrageous that I had to leave him, but by that time my new friend Mrs. Blank, had left him too, and she took me to a dozen different places, where I could get all the dope, of every kind, I wanted.

Mrs. Blank knew every speakeasy, every drug dealer, every vice den in town. She hated to be alone a minute and she surrounded herself with a group of rich men and women, every one of them a dope fiend to the worst degree.

Dope Orgies

She took me to parties, and dope orgies that lasted from one to two hours to three or four days and nights. Not all at once, of course.

I began by going to Mrs. Blank's house to a cocktail party.

Mrs. Blank lived in a magnificent house in Park avenue. Her party began at 4 o'clock. I was a little late when I got there, but the party had already begun. Mrs. Blank's gray-haired husband was the host. A rich lawyer was one of the guests, and so was the estranged husband of a Swedish noblewoman, a French count and his fiance, the widow of a millionaire wholesaler, and a pretty little blonde woman, who was the wife of a once famous motion picture director.

The minute I came into the room, the host gave me a water goblet full of rye whisky.

And not five minutes later, the lawyer offered me without a word of apology or explanation, a sniff of cocaine.

"Well, now dearie," said Mrs. Blank, stepping up to us and taking a sniff herself, "you're one of us, everything goes in this camp."

Gorgeous Room

She made a sweeping gesture at the tapestried drawing room—one of the most gorgeous rooms I had ever seen, and in Hollywood we know what gorgeous rooms are like.

"We're all sniffers, so you needn't be embarrassed."

That party was comparatively mild. We all drank, as fast as we could drink, and we all had three or four sniffs of cocaine, but we left before 8 o'clock.

Two of the men I met there tried to persuade me to go to a "big jamboree" to be given in the Park avenue home of a rich stock broker the next evening.

I said no.

The next morning that man and two of the other men I met at the party called me up, but I refused their invitations.

For three or four days, I lived in a strange, terrified, haunted haze.

I didn't see anyone, I never left my room. I couldn't bear to look a human being in the face.

On the end of the fifth day, I said "yes," in answer to a party invitation, proffered by a man I shall call Mr. Dee.

'Tea' With Baron

He was one of the guests at Mrs. Blank's party. He invited me to a tea dance and party at the home of a certain very smart Baron and Baroness.

When we arrived at the party the radio was on in full blast, some of the guests were dancing, some were sitting or half lying on couches staring straight ahead of them, like brain-sick prisoners in some haunt of misery.

It is not the fashion to introduce people to each other when they meet at dope parties. You talk to anyone you happen to like, but he never asks your name and you are never told who he is.

When a dope party is on the carpet, the regular servants are always dismissed for the day.

An outside "caterer," who knows just how to manage a dope party is engaged.

I shall not tell the details of this horrible orgy which lasted for three days and three nights, except to say that at the beginning of the party the caterer came in with a huge glass bowl full of colorless liquid. He passed this bowl around on a silver salver and each guest produced a strange looking affair which turned out to be a hypodermic needle, dipped the needle into the bowl and waited.

When all of the needles were filled the hostess raised her hand with a gesture of hospitality, and gave a toast just as if she were offering her guests a glass of champagne.

I had no "hypo" with me and the "caterer" obligingly offered me a beautifully engraved silver needle.

In three seconds we were off, dull and dazed, into the strange, slimy torpor of morphine.

A little later the cocaine appeared, and then madness followed.

Queer People

There are many of such parties given in New York today. I don't know about the other cities, but I do know about New York and London and Berlin and Vienna and Paris.

You meet the strangest people at these parties, men and women well known in various parts of the world, some of them of secure position, and some of them shabby adventurers, who have climbed up the ladder—of dope!

At one of these parties, I met a little cockney cab driver who could neither read nor write, but he was amusing when he was "snowed under," so he was a regular guest, and we all called him London, and let it go at that.

That dope party was the first of a long series that are like chapters from the memoirs of a Lost Soul.

Many a mother who wonders what ails her young daughter, many a wife who cannot understand the strange change in her husband would get a surprise if she could look through the portiers and see a dope party in progress in some beautiful home in New York.

A ghastly aftermath of a drug orgy is told Monday by Alma Rubens; father meets son, each learns the other is a victim of dope.

3 False Alarms Land Fire Fan Behind Bars

George Smith, 38, of 521 Washington street, today began serving 30 days in jail under sentence of Judge George V. Moore, in Criminal Court, during which time he will not see the fire engines run.

Smith pleaded guilty to sending in three false alarms, and was remanded to jail where his mentality was examined by Dr. C. J. Ellis. The latter reported that Smith was not unbalanced.

ROMANCE ENDS IN DIVORCE

A college romance, with a secret wedding and parting the next day, was ended by a divorce decree granted Dr. Louis L. Means, 28, 817 Union avenue, McKeesport, from Gertrude Niven Means, 25, of Wheeling, W. Va., handed down in Common Pleas Court by Judge Harry H. Rowand.

They were married March 26, 1926, when Means was a medical student at the University of Pittsburg. The next day the bride left for her Wheeling home and despite frequent visits to her there and written pleas she has refused to come here and live with Dr. Means, he testified. He said she evaded the subject and gave no reason for her failure to live with him.

Facing the Face Problem

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

can send your face to the cleaner's and have it pressed and ironed. All Doc Crum used was a chisel, a hammer and a thumb tack.

The thumb tack is the most important. From now on the location of the face depends on the holding power of the tack.

The operation was a success. There was no reprieve from the governor.

Carnera whipped Maloney, all right, and it might have been a good battle if the audience could have gotten warmed up.

But it stopped just when the audience was going to choose up sides.

The history of pugilism wouldn't be complete without the records of the subways. Now, there's where a man can see a fight once in a while.

Most of them are started by mashers. We don't know why the mashers choose the subway, because a Beau Brummel looks much more alluring on a yacht or in a limousine.

But they do. And they always lose. And there is nothing sillier than a masher with his derby hat jammed down over a waxed mustache that is bending the wrong way.

We have never tried to mash any lady in the subway. We imagine it would be much easier to accost a lady in a Zeppelin. You could point out of a window and say:

"Pardon me, miss, isn't that Africa?"

Which is talking geography in a big way. But in the subway you must start:

"Aren't you Miss..."

She yells, "No, I'm not" and smacks you over the head with a well-oiled umbrella. That puts you on the floor and you're very fortunate if you stay in the fairway.

But one smack isn't par for the subway course. You get a couple of more umbrella wallopuxes over the hat and then the other passengers jump in to kick you around on a five-cent fare.

Now, what do you do? Can you still be a gentleman, rise from the floor and say:

"Madam, will you take my seat?"

Nope. The best course is an indiscreet silence. The next best thing you can do is to play that you are a piece of silver paper and flutter down the street.

The fine for subway mashing is usually $10 or 10 days. But the mashers still keep on trying and the girls still insist on swinging those wild umbrellas.

We could stop those boys by making the fine a year and a thousand or giving the girls baseball bats.

LUCKIES are always kind to your throat

The advice of your physician is: Keep out of doors, in the open air, breathe deeply; take plenty of exercise in the mellow sunshine, and have a periodic check-up on the health of your body.

TUNE IN—The Lucky Strike Dance Orchestra, every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evening over N. B. C. networks.

Everyone knows that sunshine mellows—that's why the "TOASTING" process includes the use of the Ultra Violet Rays. LUCKY STRIKE—made of the finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—THEN—"IT'S TOASTED"—an extra, secret heating process. Harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos are expelled by "TOASTING." Club Groups Will Hear Maj. Booth

Maj. Charles Brandon Booth, son of Gen. Ballington Booth and Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth, commanders of the Volunteers of America, is to speak at the joint meeting of the home and welfare department of the Congress of Clubs on Monday. The speaker will be introduced by W. S. Diggs, chairman of the advisory board of the Volunteers, under the auspices of which Maj. Booth is giving a week's program of lectures in Pittsburgh.

For 24 years Maj. Booth has been on the lecture platform and during some seasons has given as high as 300 addresses. For 10 years he was general secretary of the prison work department of the organization founded by his noted parents. Here he served his apprenticeship as a student of child problems. Later he was executive secretary of the famed St. George's Church, New York City, and then became national field secretary of the Big Brother and Big Sister Federation, which position he relinquished to return to nationwide work for the Volunteers.

Last night in the public school auditorium, the Turtle Creek Woman's Club held a meeting that was marked by several features of unusual interest. Each year the club makes a gift to the domestic science department of the school, and last night linens and a kitchen clock were presented by Mrs. E. J. Ocker, president, and accepted by Miss Elizabeth Findley on behalf of the school. Edward Booth played a trumpet solo, Polly Blackwood sang, accompanied by Sadie Blackwood, and a one-act play, "Mothballs," was given by Mrs. H. S. Zischkau, Mrs. M. D. Williams and Mrs. Paul Graham.

RUFFLED FROCKS FEATURED FOR WEAR THIS SPRING

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, March 14.—We may have been rough on ruffles by ignoring them for so many seasons until last year, but we are most certainly giving them their innings right now. The ruffle has grown in importance until it has become the most important part of the frock—much more than just a trimming. For it is now part of the silhouette, and some of the new frocks rely on the trimming entirely for line and trimming. Of course, the ruffled frock must be carefully studied and handled, otherwise it appears rather insipid and has a tendency to make the wearer seem rather kittenish.

BERUFFLED ORGANDIE and net has been sacred to the deb and subdeb for some time, but ruffles on frocks of other fabrics are something else again. They are at their best when used in the cascade form, cascading gracefully from shoulder to hem. This type of frock lends itself beautifully to the more mature, dignified type, while the apron ruffle is especially good for the younger woman.

WE SHOW today sketches of ruffled frocks, each one a distinct example of ruffled charm. The first featured the cascade ruffle and is of black crepe combined with fine black lace. The latter extends from the left shoulder to the deep, shirred flounce. The decolletage is "V" shaped both in front and back and there is a narrow flat belt. It is a Chantal model and is featured in the new collection of this house.

THE MODEL to the right is by Jane Regny. Dark powder blue chiffon is the fabric. So cleverly designed is this simply cut frock that one has the impression of a really elaborate gown. This effect is due to the carefully studied arrangement of the circular ruffles on the skirt.

THESE ARE MUCH higher and deeper on the hip and meet those from the opposite hip and, joining them, cascade down the right side of the front of the skirt. There is practically no back to the bodice, so low is the decolletage.

$50,000,000 for Farm Stabilization Justified In View of Hoover

cushion for absorbing the shocks of worldwide devastating deflation.

James C. Stone, Legge's successor as chairman of the Farm Board, in defending these emergency operations, told me that it was of course impossible to know in advance what the government would show, from a profit and loss standpoint, on these purchases of wheat and cotton. He insisted, however, that the country ought to consider in this connection the benefits of economic stabilization conferred on business and agriculture by preventing a general breakdown in the districts dependent on cotton and wheat.

President Hoover regards these emergency operations as a phase of the administration's general economic stabilization program, and the White House takes pride in the fact that this period of downward readjustment in general business has been singularly free of social violence, riots and strikes. Unless the Farm Board had acted in February and November last year, the administration thinks that a social collapse compared to that which ensued after the panic of 1873 might have occurred.

FIGHTS WAGE CUTS

Two other planks in the stabilization program, which affected the cities more directly, also served to allay social unrest better than has been accomplished in this depression in foreign countries or in previous recessions at home, according to the administration viewpoint. These include the President's insistence at the White House conferences in November, 1929, that hourly wage rates be maintained, and also on co-ordinated relief efforts throughout the country. As a result of the White House conferences, capital and labor accepted an informal truce putting a moratorium on efforts to revise working conditions and wages. Recently, some Wall street bankers, including A. W. Wiggin, head of the Chase National City Bank, and George E. Roberts, vice president of the City National Bank, have raised the question of whether wage cuts might not be advisable, but the President feels that the great industrial leaders of the country are in accord with him that rates should be maintained.

With increasing evidence that the decline in general business has been checked, the President believes that the gainfully employed public can facilitate recovery by pursuing normal spending policies. Under the fear psychology, which became worst in December and which has subsequently improved, the President feels that many citizens, abnormally cautious, were spending for consumable goods less than they could afford to. Though reluctant to make prophecies at this time, the President is impressed with signs that the country is coming out of the depression, and that public psychology is better.

SAVINGS STRESSED

In considering the process of economic recuperation, the engineer and economist in the White House, who reads the business charts with as much technical zest and discrimination as any captain of industry, lays stress on the recent piling up of savings. He sees in that the pressure of this capital which will seek a satisfactory earning power will expedite recovery. High treasury officials, in considering the business outlook, think that cheap money is the most favorable factor, and are hopeful that bargain money rates will encourage railroads to electrify, as the Pennsylvania system is doing, and will stimulate other permanent capital improvements which would be postponed if capital were dearer.

Though the White House thinks that after the depression it will be necessary to re-examine the effect of the banking system on business, it is impressed with the current strength of well-managed banks, and believes that the epidemic of bank suspensions last year occurred chiefly among incompetently-managed institutions.

As to the doctrinaire of pessimism that perhaps depression will become the new normal, President Hoover emphatically believes that historical precedent belies such a viewpoint. He thinks that such pessimism is common to the troughs of a depression period, and is the converse of the view at the height of booms that setbacks will not recur.

$700,000 LOOT IN GEM THEFT

PALM BEACH, Fla., March 14.—(INS)—The quartet of bandits who boldly looted the Palm Beach branch of Charlton & Co., New York jewelers, escaping with loot estimated at $700,000 or more, were still at large today despite an intensive manhunt.

That the loot may total $1,000,000 was made known by G. A. Peacock, manager of the branch who announced that the jewelry was fully covered by insurance.

Detectives characterized the robbery as one of the boldest ever executed at the island resort here. Three of the four gunmen kidnaped Otto Wegener, employe of the firm, threatening to kill him if he failed to obey their commands.

From Wegener they obtained the keys to the office and the combination to the safe, he told Sheriff R. C. Baker. Wegener said he was seized in front of his hotel, driven to an untenanted house and threatened until he gave the information.

Landslide Destroys 2 French Villages

CHAMBERY, France, March 14.—(Universal)—A landslide moving down a mountainside at the rate of 300 feet an hour, had early today engulfed the tiny villages of Michaud and Berges. Two other towns are threatened with destruction.

The 125 inhabitants of Michaud and Berges fled terror-stricken when the avalanche of mud, rocks and snow began moving down on their homes. The landslide is believed caused by recent heavy rainfall.

Bridge Livens Trip Of Tired Commuters

LOS ANGELES, March 14.—(AP.)—Now comes the interurban bridge tournament, played on electric cars by tired business men hurrying home from harrowing days at the office.

The Pacific Electric Railroad, to add zest to commuting, fitted out its interurban trains with bridge tables. The tournament was the inevitable result.

How to Smash Racketeering!

MAJ. GEN. SMEDLEY T. BUTLER,
. . . United States Marine Corps . . .

Declares That Crime Is Rampant Through the Cupidity of Politicians

Gen. Butler Says:—

"A REAL DANGER to our institutions lies in the fact that as criminals and racketeers become more powerful, through their alliances with influential politicians and office-holders, law-abiding people eventually will lose confidence in our system of government and, in desperation, will seek other means of procuring for themselves the security and self-respect to which they have every right to feel entitled as citizens of a civilized country."

* * * *

"The only solution, it seems to me, is for the people to get genuinely aroused and stay aroused until their chosen representatives do their duty. Until then there will be no real, lasting change for the better in the daily battle with the underworld."

* * * *

"Crime cannot be abolished, probably not even in Utopia, but it can be reduced, and reduced tremendously, and kept down by efficient police, honestly and ably directed."

* * * *

"I believe that a single state-controlled police force in every one of our 48 states, organized and trained somewhat along military lines, modernly equipped and ably commanded, would provide the answer to the pressing question of crime reduction."

RADIO DEPICTS SCENE IN CITY ROOM

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

If you've ever wondered in what sort of an environment these words are typed for you from day to day, tune WCAE at 7:30 tonight. A background typical of the average city room is to be created with the clicking of typewriters and the staccato hopping of automatic telegraph machines in the New York office of the Associated Press. Romance and pathos alike in the day's news are woven into stories to the accompaniment of this humdrum obligato. Visitors to newspaper plants always want to know first thing how it is possible to write anything in such an environment. And when we stop to think about it we wonder too. James Wallington, himself a former reporter, and George Hicks are to explain how a newspaper story is handled by the Associated Press from the arrival of the first bulletin to final wire clearance of the complete story to all the world.

Darrell V. Martin

We shall hear the voices of Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press, and Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Company, speaking from Chicago. This broadcast promises to be very interesting.

Wallington and Hicks, you will recall, were the boys who gave us an excellent description of submarine maneuvers off the New England coast. They team superbly in broadcasts of this nature.

Amos 'n' Andy, Phil Cook, Artrid Fjelde, Sisters of the Skillet, Lee Sims, Wallace Butterworth are to war dance for KDKA at midnight when NBC celebrates the capture of WDAY from CBS. For the first half hour of this fun time WJZ at 11:30.

Rivalry between the two networks has become extremely tense—hence all the whoopee when one chain adds another station. KFYR also is to receive the NBC blessing.

Clifford Marshall, graduate of Peabody High School and lately a special arranger for RKO, has been named musical director of WCAE to succeed Gertrude Mohr.

QUESTION A DAY:

Is it true that Wayne King has left the air?—Hazel R., Castle Shannon.

Answer—Wayne has been on KYW at 11:30 nightly, except Thursday, for many weeks.

WWRL in New York contends that tenors are heard farther than other radio singers and produces as proof the logs of several fans in England who say they pick up Joe White (formerly Silver Masked tenor) with regularity on small sets.

Some tenors we've heard could cross the ocean without radio.

Sir Hubert Wilkins is to disclose further plans of his submarine trip to the North Pole on WCAE next Wednesday night.

Ray Knight — so the village belles are "told" when the curfew rings in Greenland. Oh, well—there's no use trying to catch up, you're always a ding-dong ahead of us.

By the way, Ray, what will you pay for 700 pounds of votes from Lawrenceville in your presidential campaign?

Speaking of belles, the prettiest one we know is Belle Baker—an old favorite—who took five encores in her first show at the Stanley yesterday.

In a two-by-four place they call the "Green Room," Belle dunked doughnuts in coffee and talked at length about Herbert, her 10-year-old boy. Much to our regret, we had to decline the original invitation to introduce her over KDKA Monday night. Belle is looking much younger and as vivacious as ever.

All in favor of bringing Ben Bernie to WJAS, say "Aye." Those opposed show up for Sunday school in City Council tomorrow.

Several fans inform us that Ed Lowry is singing his "Muddy Waters" over KMOX (1090) every Saturday night at 9:30.

V. J., City—Parker Wilson plays the part of "Yu 'An Hee See' in Sax Rohmer's Sunday night radio serial.

THE LITTLE THINGS

You'll enjoy Ben Alley and Ann Leaf on WJAS at 8:15 . . . Kate Smith (what a tantalizing voice!) has signed for a series of WJZ broadcasts on Tuesdays, Thursdays at 11:30 . . . Eddie Dowling is to be M. C. of a special St. Patrick program on WCAE next Tuesday night at 11 . . . B. A. Rolfe's tenor, Theo Alban, is slated for the operatic stage next February when his present contract expires, saveth the radio girl who goes by the stars . . . Guy Lombardo and his three Canadian brothers have taken out "first papers" . . . That's all until tomorrow.

The LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, March 14.—Just as Amos 'n' Andy were believed to be descending slowly but surely from the ethermost heights of popularity they hit happily upon the idea of airing a breach of promise suit and again they are riding the crest of the radio sea.

Public interest in the blundering Harlem oafs seemed to have reached its peak just prior to their entrance within the gilded gates of Hollywood. It fell off sharply as the characters harassed by the unanticipated vexations of screenland, were forced to mark time in their radio episodes. They were not able to strike out upon new ideas since it was necessary that their radio chatter synchronize with the characterizations and situations of their talking picture.

And though the money rolled to them in a golden stream from the coffers of the M. Sarnoff, a heavy price was paid for prosperity. And none knew it better than Amos 'n' Andy. What to do? What to do to restore their prestige? Suddenly they hit upon the happy notion of bringing Andy into court as the defender of a breach of promise suit brought by Madam Queen. It clicked at once. The episode stretched over a period of several weeks, revived public interest, put the blackface stars again at the top of the radio heap.

It is the most popular episode that Amos 'n' Andy have yet broadcast. Freeman F. Gosden (Amos) told your correspondent. And good showmen that they are, they wisely brought it to an end, before it exhausted its appeal, and turned their attention to other phases of their bewildered Harlem life.

It has been a year since we have talked with Amos 'n' Andy. They are as casual, as seemingly unimpressed by their success as when they first became a household ritual. As in the past, Gosden continues to be the mouthpiece of the team. He talks well, interspersing his remarks upon his radio work with Negro dialect stories of the South.

At a luncheon in what Andy might call the Louis Quince room of the St. Regis, the "boys"—their benevolent boss, Aylesworth, always refers to them as the "boys"—Amos disclosed some of the secrets of his ethereal life, life.

We learned, for example, that Brother Crawford is, next to the title roles, the most popular character in the episode that Lightnin' is the most unpopular, that Amos received a bouquet of pansies after his impersonation of Madam Queen, that they prepare their scripts three days ahead, that rarely is there a squawk from members of the colored race over any detail of characterization, that a booking in the vaudeville tents is not being considered even remotely, that no plans have been made for further talkies.

Their visit to New York is of both a legal and professional nature. They not only intend to bring a halt to the piracy of their names in the manufacture and sale of novelty toys, but they plan to refurnish their characterization and vocabulary by visits to Harlem.

Such visits, Amos said, are always made stealthily. It would not pay to put Harlem on its guard. They talked to Negro policemen, chauffeurs, guardians of speakeasies, storekeepers, street loungers. Everybody, everything in the Black Belt is grist to their microphonic mill. They store up their impressions, snatches of conversation, new Negro slang for future broadcasts.

"The Velvet Voice of the Air"

The

PIANO

BY—
THE LATE
DR. FRANK CRANE

IF YOU were limited to one book you might want the dictionary. Some people would want the Bible. If you were limited to one piece of furniture in the house your choice should be the piano.

The piano is easily the most important instrument in the world.

It is the greatest common denominator of all musical instruments.

Most music that is written for an orchestra or a banjo, a saxophone or the human voice, is reducible to a piano score and usually is first composed on the piano.

There is no doubt about music being the most cultural of studies. It connotes rhythm and harmony, two things that are essential in all departments of human activity. Rhythm is necessary even in the motion pictures and you must have a sense of harmony if you are going to be an orator, a painter or a sculptor.

The piano is the best door to the knowledge of music. Almost everybody enters into the field of music by that door.

The piano is the heart of the home. About it naturally groups all the family. A silent house is essentially a desolate one.

The piano is the life of every social gathering.

If anyone can play the piano, even manage so-so with accompaniments, a group gathers around him and the house is enlivened by the voices of the young, or partners are chosen for dancing.

Almost every child can learn music if he is taught young enough. Modern methods of instruction are so simple that even the dullest can understand.

It is a deprivation for any child not to know the piano.

It is the best form of self-expression. As Thomas Moore's Anacreontic runs:

"Music! Oh, how faint, how weak,
Language fades before thy spell!
Oh, why should passion ever speak
When thou canst breathe her soul so well?"

Our moments of greatest delight, perhaps, are our moments of self-expression. Nothing is better suited to fully set forth our phases of emotion than the piano. No substitute will do. It is not enough to play the harp or the violin without a basic acquaintance with the piano.

Of course, there is pleasure in attending concerts, or listening to band music, or singing, but no pleasure is so full and so profitable, withal, as the joy we get in making our own music. Again I say that if you are to buy only one piece of furniture for your home, let it be a piano.

Reprinted by Permission of the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, Copyright 1928.

A free course in piano instruction is being printed every Sunday in the Sun-Telegraph.

It is the W. Scott Grove Music Simplifier Course in Piano Playing. This course is so comprehensive that even a child can learn the fundamental principles in only a few lessons.

MILK DEALERS PLAN ACTIVE YEAR

Liberty Dairy Official Named 1931 President; To Meet Every Month

With the selection of Peter P. Carney, director of sales of the Liberty Dairy Products Company, as its president, the Greater Pittsburgh Milk Dealers' Association is planning a most active year.

The first of the numerous progressive steps to be undertaken by the association is a unified effort to get householders to return empty milk bottles. This organized effort will be made in April. On each of the four Tuesdays in April every dairy concern in the Pittsburgh district will put collars on the milk bottles, requesting the housekeepers to make return of all bottles daily and to unearth any milk bottles they have about the house and return them.

HUGE BOTTLE LOSS

There is no telling just how many milk bottles the dairy concerns of the Pittsburgh district lose every day, but it is known that the Allegheny County Bottle Exchange picks up in the neighborhood of 44,000 bottles daily and returns them to the dairy concerns.

It is estimated that no less than 60,000 of the milk bottles that are left at homes every day are thrown away by the housewife instead of returning the bottle to the dairy from which it was received.

OTHER NEW OFFICERS

Through the Milk Dealers' Association daylight delivery was inaugurated a year ago, and this has proven a boon to everyone. Every effort will be made this year to effect greater merchandising efforts by the dealers to educate the general public in greater uses of milk as a health food and to co-operate with city, county and state officials in everything that will tend to better milk conditions in this territory.

Besides M. Carney other new officers named for 1931 by the Milk Dealers' Association are: Ray Cronenweth, vice president; Harold Gosser, secretary; J. L. Hipson, treasurer.

Meetings of the Greater Pittsburgh Milk Dealers' Association will be held the first Thursday of each month at which time subjects of importance to the dairy industry and the consumers will be discussed.

PAINTERS' MEET SCHEDULED

The annual meeting of the Master Painters and Decorators Association of Pittsburgh will be held in the Fort Pitt Hotel on Friday, March 20. The program includes an address by Carl Dabelstein, president of the Master Painters and Decorators Association. P. A. Freyvogel, ex-president of the state association, will talk on "Success of the Master Painter Hinges on His Co-operation With Fellow Craftsmen."

Tarred Dentist Refused Damages

SPRINGVILLE, La., March 14.—(AP.)—A jury denied Dr. Sedgie L. Newsom, Hammond, La., dentist, $60,000 damages in his suit against Ike, Henry and Newton Starns, brothers, who subjected him to a coat of tar and feathers.

The Starns brothers on the witness stand said their action was prompted by the dentist's love affair with the wife of Ike Starns.

'Hot Time' Song Writer Passes 83

NEW YORK, March 14.—(INS.)—The man who wrote that famous ditty, "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," celebrated his eighty-third birthday today. He is Theodore August Metz. Metz said he would visit the municipal lodging house tomorrow to play on his violin for the jobless.

PUBLIC REVISES ITS OPINION OF RAILS

Regulations Keep Carrier Shares From Reaping Full Benefits of Prosperity

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, March 14.—It would be interesting to make a chart recording the adverse effect on railroad credit of the disposition of railroad executives to advertise the plight of the carriers.

Mr. Rukeyser

At any rate, following the organized attempt of the carriers to change the shuffle in the field of public regulation, the investment public has once again revised downward its estimate of the worth of railroad stocks.

And, of course, the new aversion is not entirely psychological, for railroads in 1930 showed the greatest relative decline in earning power. The record demonstrates anew that under present regulation the railroads share fully in adversity, but do not participate up to the hilt in prosperity.

The restraints in railroad profits in time of prosperity comes from the rate-fixing policy, on the one hand, and from inroads on traffic by competitive agencies such as busses, private automobiles, trucks and inland canal boats, on the other.

CHANCES UNLIMITED

Accordingly, the bulls on America have shown a preference for stocks of monopolistic power and light companies, which are set up to share fully in the progress of communities.

Moreover, industrial shares also have more allurement speculatively than the rails because their potential profits are theoretically unlimited because of the absence of regulation.

On the other hand, though the limitations on railroad securities must be conceded, railroad issues seem overdeflated at present. They reflect current earnings, which, from a long range standpoint, are distinctly subnormal. The rails will restore their earning power with a return of prosperity. Unlike individual industrial corporations, they are less likely to be forced out by competition or made obsolescent by new inventions.

OFFICE HOLDUP TRIO SOUGHT

Police today sought three men who late last night forced their way into the office of W. H. Wright, secretary of Collins & Wright, at Fifty-fifth and Butler streets, robbed the safe of $5 and Wright of $7 and a watch, and escaped after tying Wright to a chair and cutting the telephone wires.

Wright, who lives at 2 Highland court, told police he went to the office to do some extra work and that he must have left the door open, and was followed by the men.

Each was masked and carried a revolver, he said. One ordered him to open the safe, from which he took the money. Then, after robbing Wright, they bound him to the chair, cut the wires and left. Wright managed to free himself two hours later and reported the robbery to the Forty-third Street Station.

CONVICT'S PAY CASE ARGUED

Whether a prisoner in the Western Penitentiary can continue to receive compensation for injuries suffered before his imprisonment, was argued before the Workmen's Compensation Board in the Fulton Building yesterday. The case was taken under advisement.

While employed in a mine of the Wilbur Coal Company near Hooversville, Somerset County, Ira Ellenberger suffered a back injury for which he received a compensation of $8.28 a week for partial disability from the company and the state workmen's insurance fund.

The case argued yesterday was an appeal from the decision of Referee John R. Keefer, who had dismissed the coal company's petition for termination of the compensation following Ellenberger's sentence to the penitentiary. In his opinion, Keefer overruled the company's contention that because of his imprisonment Ellenberger was unable to show "his present loss of earning power or status of disability," his compensation should be suspended until such time as he could establish the fact that he was entitled to further payment.

U. S. BUILDING INCREASES

WASHINGTON, March 14.—(AP.)—A steady increase in construction work the past two months was indicated today by Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, chief of engineers, in a report to Secretary Hurley.

During January, the general reported, work was begun on almost one-half of new contract operations, totaling nearly $10,000,000. The number of men employed under contracts was estimated at 2,252, not including 1,415 men engaged in special flood control work.

Simultaneously, Brig. Gen. G. B. Pillsbury, assistant chief of Army engineers, reported to the secretary 800 additional men will be employed on three major projects now pending.

DEFLATIING THE PAY ENVELOPE

—By JOHN H. VAN DEVENTER—

During the past few weeks, several of our prominent bankers have voiced the belief that "it is time that labor should be deflated." This sounds like a very simple operation, similar to removing the cap from a tire valve and letting out some of the air. There are several serious objections to it, however, from the standpoint of economic welfare, not to speak of some eight or nine million individual objections on the part of the proposed deflatees.

One drawback to wage "deflation" is that American business cannot run successfully on flat tires. It is bad enough to have the self-starter out of order, as it has been for the past 12 months or more without adding an additional drag.

Another obstacle in the way of this proposal is that the tires are pretty low anyway. The average pay envelope of our manufacturing industries during the best of boom times since the war was less than $25 per week per wage earner, according to government statistics. This was when we were working full time or overtime.

During the past 18 months, and particularly during 1930, short hours have been the rule in industry. One, two and three days of work per week have been common in many industries. Few of them have averaged better than four days per week. Under these conditions the average pay envelope has already had a lot of deflating. It is now well under the $20 mark.

Leaders in industry realize that cutting wages is not the way to restore prosperity. James J. Farrel, president of the United States Steel Corporation, came out flat footedly against it early last year, and the steel industry together with many others has steadfastly maintained this position.

These men who know industry through first hand contact with it and who believe that business has already turned the corner, are convinced that it would be extremely foolish to let any more air out of the tires just when the car has begun its long upward climb back to normal.

Girl Clerk Faints, Burned on Stove

OIL CITY, Pa., March 14.—Improvement in the condition of Mary Masterson, 28, who fainted and fell against a stove, suffering burns, was reported at Oil City Hospital. The young woman, clerk in a store here, lay for 10 minutes in front of the stove before other clerks found her unconscious.

MINERS SEEK UNPAID WAGES

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 14.—A committee of 50 miners, representing 175 men employed in the Waverly mine, owned by J. W. Stephenson & Co., at Penowa, called at the office of District Attorney Warren S. Burchinal here, and asked assistance in collecting six weeks' wages alleged due them. They charged officials ignored their demands for wages, totalling more than $4,000.

The miners declared high prices in the company store were bringing suffering to their families. They charged that eggs are sold at 60 cents a dozen, salt at 25 cents a box, potatoes at $6 a bag and other commodities at corresponding prices.

3 HELD IN RAID ON NORTH SIDE

North Side police under Capt. Anthony Black and Lieut. Zack Fleming early today raided a house at 1310 Allegheny avenue where they reported they found a 100-gallon still in operation, confiscated a large amount of moonshine and arrested three men. At the police station the prisoners said they were Frank Casino, 26, of the Allegheny avenue address; Alexander Divillio, 22, of 1813 Cliff street, and Harry Abbott, 24, of 1803 Bedford avenue. They were charged with violation of the Snyder act and later released under bond of $1,000 each.

NATURAL GAS CONSUMPTION INCREASES

Distribution Through Pipe Lines of Manufacturers Growing, Records Reveal

NEW YORK, March 14.—Natural gas is rapidly displacing manufactured gas in many sections of the country, but public utility companies producing these competitive products are co-operating with little friction. There is an increasing volume of natural gas each year being distributed through the mains of the principal manufactured gas companies. About 20 per cent of total annual sales from manufactured gas systems now represents natural gas, according to a statement by G. E. Barrett & Co.

Consumption of natural gas increased from 798,200,000,000 cubic feet in 1920 to approximately 1,940,000,000,000 cubic feet in 1930, an increase of about 150 per cent. During the same period the total number of natural gas customers doubled, increasing from 2,636,600 to an estimated total of 5,300,000. Compared with this unprecedented expansion in the natural gas field, manufactured gas sales showed an increase of about 40 per cent from 300,700,000,000 cubic feet in 1920 to approximately 425,000,000,000 cubic feet in 1930, while manufactured gas customers increased from 8,837,000 in 1920 to the present estimated number of 11,000,000, or about 25 per cent, it is shown.

WIDE FIELD OPEN

The growing tendency on the part of manufactured gas companies to purchase natural gas for distribution through their own mains, the statement points out, is shown by the fact that such purchases increased from 77,400,000,000 cubic feet in 1928 to 112,800,000,000 cubic feet in 1929, a gain of 45 per cent. On the other hand, total artificial gas produced and natural gas purchased by manufactured gas companies in 1929 increased only 9 per cent over 1928.

Manufactured gas is strongly intrenched in the domestic field, it is stated, as is indicated by the fact that its consumers are well over twice as numerous as those of natural gas. This fuel has up to now been restricted in its expansion primarily to industrial purposes because of the remoteness of most natural gas fields from large population centers. Out of a total consumption of 1,917,693,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas shown by U. S. Department of Commerce figures for 1929, only 359,866,000,000 cubic feet, or 19 per cent, was consumed in homes. Thus a tremendous field for growth in domestic markets is awaiting the natural gas industry.

"Public Improvements Promote Progress"

The West End-North Side Bridge, now under construction, will span the Ohio River, extending from West Carson street between Main and Steuben streets to Western avenue at Manhattan street on the North Side.

The main span of this bridge will be a two-hinged arch with a span of 780 feet center to center of river piers. Four Warren trusses make up the approach to the main span on the West End side of the structure. The bridge will carry a 40-foot roadway and two nine-foot sidewalks.

The estimated cost of this bridge, funds for which were approved in the 1928 Peoples Bond Issue, is $3,540,000. It is expected that this bridge will be opened to traffic in the spring of 1932.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

MARCH STEEL OUTPUT RATE JUMPS

Between 50 and 60% Gain Over December Forecast; Situation Unsatisfactory

By B. F. V. LUTY.

Steel production appears to have had a phenomenal increase, for this month's production bids fair to be between 50 and 60 per cent over the December rate. This is several times the percentage increase that occurs, from seasonal influences in times that are generally active. When the business commentators have been saying that trade in general has been having no more than usual seasonal increase, if as much, it would seem that steel is very fortunate.

The matter is not so simple, however. Steel tonnage has always had wide fluctuations, much greater than trade in general. If steel production were plotted against general business, with the same long term average, it would run alternately above and below the general line. Last December it was far below the general industrial or business level. Using the Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial production, manufacturing and mining, as basis for comparison, it may be said that this month steel is running somewhat above general industry, and by just about the amount that steel in March has run above its average for the whole year in ordinary years.

STEEL AND BUSINESS

Thus steel has regained its average relationship to trade in general, roughly speaking, but the situation is not satisfactory because business in general is not satisfactory. It has, however, done more than would be expected, since the general principle is that when business is bad steel is still worse and when business is good steel is still better. By the same token, steel cannot be expected to improve farther from its present position, except as general business may grow better. It will do well to maintain its present relationship since this is the time when in ordinary years steel is at its seasonal peak. Hopes have been entertained that steel would have progressive improvements for several months, not slipping in activity during the second quarter, but there are no measurable facts to insure fulfillment of such hopes.

PRICE FIXING CHANGED

Steel sellers are abandoning a price practice more or less in vogue from time immemorial, that of naming prices for a given quarter of the year. In the old days they sometimes had contracts for several successive quarters. In recent time contracting has been for only a single quarter. While there was not much of it there was an expectation on the part of buyers that they would be taken care of through a quarter even if they had not contracted. Thus mills had four times a year in which to make advances, while every business day was one on which the market could slip—rather bad odds. By practice, price advances for second quarter would be made approximately in the first half of March. This was not feasible, and makers of bars, shapes, plates, sheets and cold finished bars have taken the position that they will accept business at old prices, but do not undertake to hold the prices open, whereby they may attempt advances at any time. In wire products a $2 a ton advance has been announced by various producers.

Man's Body Found; Triangle Indicated

KANSAS CITY, March 14.—(AP.)—The body of Nick Valenti, 25, known to police as a bootlegger, was found at an isolated spot along Cliff drive here. Lacerations on the victim's face and body led to belief he had been thrown from an 8-foot retaining wall from a moving motor car.

A note found in a pocket, apparently written to the victim, indicated he had been seen in the company of a married woman. The police are attempting to learn if this had any connection with the slaying.

Forbes

Shops in New York Attract More Buyers

By B. C. FORBES

MY WIFE notices a very notable increase in the number of shoppers in New York. Stores which looked deserted earlier in the year are now much better patronized.

Mr. Forbes

She declares that never before has she seen such bargains in the more expensive lines of clothes, especially in furs, fur coats and fur-trimmed garments.

Sales people say that there is considerably more shopping than buying, that customers often visit many establishments before making a final choice.

From a men's retail clothing house which has a number of stores, I learn that business lately has picked up. To this remark was immediately added:

"But men are looking for bargains—and so are their wives when they shop with them or for them. There is not keen demand for higher-priced stuff. But when we announce reductions, we can pretty well fill the stores. This makes it hard to make reasonable profits. But, at that, we are encouraged by the increase in volume."

PRESIDENT MATTHEW S. Sloan, of New York Edison, tells me that there has been amazing expansion in the sales of domestic refrigerators. A monthly payment system did the trick.

Great improvements have been effected by manufacturers in the last year or two. Competition has become extraordinarily keen. General Electric, following the example of General Motors, entered the field in a large and very aggressive way. One or two other companies are also making vigorous headway.

The result is that this very young industry is rapidly developing into a giant.

Utilities have co-operated enthusiastically because each machine installed means consumption of additional current throughout the whole 24 hours, a very desirable species of "load," as the utility purveyors call it.

Recent developments prove that a great many people have plenty of money to buy things they keenly want. It takes ingenuity, however, to whet their appetites.

TALKING ABOUT the plentifulness of money, Wall Street has been astounded by the eager absorption of gigantic issues of new bonds. Secretary Mellon was offered several billions at very low interest rates and an issu of $100,000,000 4½s by New York City was eagerly bid for at a handsome premium, and promptly snapped up by investors.

In one day New York Central disposed of $75,000,000 and Pennsylvania Railroad $50,000,000. The port authority of New York readily sold $66,000,000. Other bond flotations have also been distributed this month.

Historically, a big market in gild-edged bonds marks the beginning of recovery in the security markets after a panic or severe depression. Next the demand spreads to good bonds offering a higher return. Then less choice bonds and preferred stocks have their innings.

Seasoned common stocks, dividend payers, are the next to attract attention. From them the demand moves down to more speculative stocks. Finally there develops a boom during which "any old thing" is bought regardless of merit or price. That completes the cycle—and a collapse follows.

It is questionable whether that traditional order will be followed this time. Stocks have overshadowed bonds in popularity in the last few years. True, last year's new money was raised mostly by bonds, not stocks. But there have been signs that stocks still possess for many greater attractions than bonds.

Incidentally, caution is still exercised in the highest financial circles. A repetition of last spring's abortive boomlet is not desired. Should stock speculation run wild this spring, it is feared that the consequences might again be unfortunate.

A slow, steady advance, based on investment rather than on speculative buying, is desired. What happens, however, will depend solely on how general business shapes up within the next few months.

HERBERT FLEISHHACKER, noted California financier, urges the calling of an international conference on silver. He regards the terrific collapse in the value of silver as the most serious of all economic developments. He feels that either the United States or Canada could take the initiative. He tells this column:

"Since the middle of January a distinctly more optimistic view has set in. Industrial recovery usually is preceded by so-called Wall Street activity, in an upward direction. The very men who foresaw the downward trend a year and a half ago now believe the turn has come and that rational revival in business will be experienced.

"With the coming of spring, which always means a wider call for labor, retail trade should improve and this, in turn should spread to all industries."

(Copyright, 1931, by B. C. Forbes.)

Auto Demand Is Factor In Business Here

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

INCREASED DEMAND FOR MATERIALS for automobile manufacturers has been a major factor in a continued, although moderate, improvement in business activity in the Pittsburgh district. While the motor car producers are still far from busy, they are gradually expanding production schedules and this is being reflected in business activity here.

Producers of both steel and glass are benefiting from the increased automobile activity. Gains in sales of these industries have been light recently but the major share of added business has been attributable to demand in Detroit.

Greater orders from motor car builders are regarded as an exceptionally good sign since Detroit has been cautious about purchasing materials for several months. The automobile makers have been working with short inventories and have been producing cars only when an immediate retail market has been assured. The present sales policies of most companies do not permit forced shipments of cars to dealers.

To Expand Production

ABOUT 220,000 CARS and trucks were made in the United States and Canada in February. It is estimated that March production will reach 300,000 which indicates that motor car building is getting into a more satisfactory stride.

Because of the conservative selling policies of the automobile industry, production figures are more nearly representative of consuming power than in the days when operating schedules were determined without regard to dealers' estimates of their ability to sell cars.

Few Steel Advances

WHILE STEEL MILL operations have been slowly increasing since the beginning of the year, ingot production is at only 55 per cent of capacity and hopes of making any great strides in improving prices have been dashed.

Except in a few lines, no changes in quotations will be made for second quarter delivery. While some of the increased prices announced in December may become effective for second quarter shipments, the producers have not been taking a particularly firm stand and the amounts realized during the coming three months may not be much higher than during the first quarter.

Confidence Improved

WHILE THE TREND of general business has been upward since January 1, the improvement has been slight and has not been sufficiently marked to indicate that a definite reversal in business conditions is taking place.

With the advent of spring weather, road building will be undertaken on an even greater scale than last year. Some of the major railroad systems are planning to push improvement programs to completion. In other lines, business has shown only seasonal changes with the exception of automobile production which is demonstrating signs of new life.

Exports of Radio Apparatus Higher

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Foreign shipments of radio apparatus totaled $1,672,904 during January, 1931, as compared with $1,523,207 in the corresponding month of 1930, the Commerce Department reports.

Total exports of all electrical equipment amounted to $7,927,454 in January, a decline of about $4,837,000 from the 1930 month.

February Hard Coal Shipments Decline

PHILADELPHIA, March 14.—Shipments of anthracite for February, as reported to the Anthracite Bureau of Information, amounted to 4,321,800 gross tons. This is a decrease of 677,908 tons from January and 386,907 tons under February, 1930.

Newsprint Output Off for February

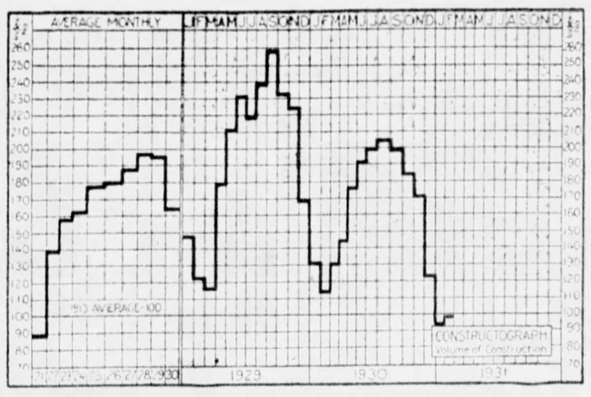
NEW YORK, March 14.—Production of newsprint by United States and Canadian mills in February amounted to 253,340 tons, or 58½ per cent of daily capacity, against 289,866 tons, or 61.1 per cent, in January, and 301,548 tons, or 74.5 per cent, in February, 1930, according to the Newsprint Service Bureau.

Production by United States mills in February was 88,788 tons, or 65.4 per cent of capacity, against 105,527 tons, or 69.1 per cent, in January, and 112,394 tons, or 86.2 per cent, in February, 1930.

More Unemployed Reported in France

PARIS, March 14.—French official figures show that 44,644 persons are on the rolls for unemployment relief compared to 11,952 at the beginning of the year.

January Construction Volume Takes Drop



VOLUME OF CONSTRUCTION IN UNITED STATES SINCE 1920

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Under the impetus of increased federal-aid highway appropriations and unusually favorable weather for winter road work, the awards of concrete surface pavement contracts during January broke all previous records for the month, showing an increase of 53 per cent over those of January a year ago, the Associated General Contractors of America point out in a statistical analysis of construction trends just completed.

The January volume of construction as a whole, however, as determined by the shipment of basic construction materials, was at its lowest point in recent years, although a four-point improvement was recorded in February when the volume rose to index number 99. The February index, however, was 15 points below that for the same month a year ago.

The association's indexes of the volume of contract awards, based on reports from the F. W. Dodge Corporation, and of long-term state and municipal bond issues reported by the Bond Buyer likewise showed a decided downward trend in January. The volume of contracts awarded in 27 states during January declined 40 points from that of the preceding month to index number 90, or a decrease of 32 per cent as compared with January, 1930. Long term state and municipal bond issues declined 50 per cent from the December total to $48,000,000, as compared with $104,000,000 for the corresponding month a year ago.

In making public the analysis, Edward J. Harding, managing director of the association, stated that while the construction industry is hopeful for more than a seasonal revival in the spring, there is at present no statistical indication that the private building revival is under way.

CHARLES B. COUCHMAN

WILL ADDRESS SCHOOL AFFAIR

An exception has been made by the American Institute of Accountants to the rule that their president does not address school gatherings. They have permitted Charles B. Couchman, C. P. A., of Barrow, Wade, Guthrie & Co., New York, to speak at the annual banquet and dinner dance of Pittsburgh School of Accountancy, which is to be held in the Fort Pitt Hotel, March 28.

WARN RAILS ON SALE OF SCRAP

CLEVELAND, March 14.—Members of the Scrap Iron and Steel Institute at their closing session Thursday served notice on the railroads of the country that the scrap industry, through its nationwide trade association, will closely scrutinize what they regard as fair or unfair practices on the part of the railroads in the disposition of the immense tonnage of scrap, which the carriers offer for sale annually.

They did this by the adoption of the following resolution: Resolved, that the national office be requested to compile and maintain a list of railroads classified as to their scrap policies; that the members be requested to inform the national office of any departures from fair and competitive bidding and awards in the marketing of railroad scrap; that the Institute render a copy of a classified list to all members and keep the members posted periodically as to revisions.

Ambridge Man Wins Fellowship Award

NEW YORK, March 14.—(AP.)—Fellowship awards to five American students for study in Belgium during the next school year were announced by the Commission for Relief in Belgium Educational Foundation.

The awards included one to Albert A. Roden, Ambridge, Pa., whose fellowship in international law was renewed for another year.

Steel Production Rises in Britain

LONDON, March 14.—British output of steel ingots in February totaled 486,400 tons against 402,200 in January. Pig iron output totaled 320,000 tons against 337,200 in January. There were 81 furnaces in blast at the end of February against 83 a month previous.

Venezuela Crude Oil Output Drops

NEW YORK, March 14.—Crude oil production in Venezuela during February totaled 9,486,327 barrels, a daily average of 338,798 barrels, against 10,384,451 barrels in January, or 334,982 barrels daily, and 10,898,535 barrels, or 389,233 daily, in February, 1930.

COLD WEATHER RETARDS GAIN IN TRADE

Oil Industry Situation Still Unsatisfactory; Collections Are Poor

A slight improvement has been noted in retail trade in this district, although colder weather has retarded the improvement to some extent, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. Jobbers in some lines report sales numerically to be somewhat larger, although individual purchases continue small.

Demand for men's and women's wearing apparel, hats, shoes and hosiery have not increased to any material extent, and reports from trade continue uneven. Hardware trade continues quiet, but there is a slight improvement in demand for furniture and carpets. Sales of new automobiles are not increasing very rapidly, while there is a fair demand for accessories.

OIL OUTPUT UP

Building construction has thus far shown comparatively little improvement, although a few large buildings are in process of erection and one or two others are expected to be started in the very near future. Demand for lumber and other building materials is still slow, but a large amount of municipal and road construction work is expected to be started as soon as weather permits and demand for cement, etc., is expected to show a material increase.

Production of crude oil shows a rather sharp increase, while numerous reductions in price have been reported, and the situation continues rather unsatisfactory. Production of bituminous coal shows a slight falling-off and demand continues slow.

While there has been a slight improvement in collections in some lines, they are still considerably below normal for this season of the year. Retail collections continue slow, and reports of tardiness are particularly numerous from installment houses.

JANUARY RAIL TRAFFIC OFF

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The volume of freight traffic handled by the Class I railroads of this country in January, 1931, amounted to 30,313,736,000 net ton miles, according to reports just received from the railroads by the Bureau of Railway Economics.

Compared with January, 1930, this was a reduction of 6,404,026,000 net ton miles or 17.4 per cent, and a reduction of 8,895,900,000 net ton miles or 22.7 per cent under January, 1929.

In the Eastern district, the volume of freight traffic handled in January was a reduction of 18.3 per cent compared with the same month in 1930, while the Southern district reported a decrease of 19.4 per cent. The Western district reported a reduction of 15.4 per cent.

New England Trade Upturn Under Way

BOSTON, March 14.—Chairmen of the state employment committees of the New England states were unanimous in reporting that conditions in their states indicated that the worst of the business depression has passed. The reports were presented at a conference on employment stabilization.

Unimpaired Engines Decline in February

NEW YORK, March 14.—Class 1 railroads, on February 15, had 5,725 locomotives in need of classified repairs, or 10.4 per cent of the number on line, according to the American Railway Association. This was an increase of 203 above February 1, at which time there were 5,522, or 10 per cent.

Western Union Net For January Gains

NEW YORK, March 14.—Western Union Telegraph Company January net operating income amounted to $263,383, comparing with $252,515 in January, 1930.

AVIATION

Pittsburgh is on the great transcontinental air routes between New York and Los Angeles in the Pacific Southwest and Portland in the Pacific Northwest. The T. A. T. operates a transcontinental line via Pittsburgh with Bettis Field, owned and operated by the Curtiss-Wright interests, as its port.

The Pittsburgh Aviation Industries, Inc., is allied with some of the most powerful aviation interests in the country and operates a training school at its Pittsburgh-Butler Airport, 25 miles from the city.

The Main Aeronautics Company has a large and well-equipped airport at Greensburg, 30 miles east of the city, also with a training school.

Aeronautics and aviation engineering are part of the course in the Carnegie Institute of Technology.

N. & W. FIGHTING 'RECAPTURE' ORDER

Road Resists Commission's Attempt to Collect On Income Above 6 Per Cent

WASHINGTON, March 14 —(AP.)—A contest against the government's attempt to collect $15,849,000 from it as excess earnings was instituted yesterday before the Interstate Commerce Commission by the Norfolk and Western Railway.

The company was ordered by the commission last month to pay over the sum as representing half of its total income for 1924 to 1926 in excess of 6 per cent on the valuation of its property.

In the protest the company said the commission had "arbitrarily" placed its value in 1926 at $579,500,000 and that the figure was much less than the fair and lawful value of the railroad.

ATTACKS BASE OF LAW

By its own calculation, it contended, the railroad was worth in that year not less than $737,700,000.

In addition the order to pay the $15,849,000 was asserted by the protest to be "based upon erroneous principles of law" and to "exceed the lawful power of the commission." It asked an opportunity to reopen conference with the commission's valuation staff and for delay in the application of the order.

OTHER CLAIMS PENDING

The demand upon the Norfolk and Western for a recovery of alleged excess income was the first to be made upon an important railroad. A number of similar claims, tentatively estimated to aggregate $270,000,000 are, however, in preparation and will be brought forward if the test proceeding against the Norfolk and Western is successful.

Aluminum Company Gets Tax Refund

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The Bureau of Internal Revenue has announced a refund of $246,918 in favor of the Aluminum Company of America, Pittsburgh, covering an over-assessment for 1918.

REVIEWS OF NEW FILMS; HOLLYWOOD, GOTHAM GOSSIP

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

The next time you ride a Fifth avenue street car see whether the motorman is the one who seems to be carrying on a little affair with a young woman who works in a Soho store. . . . Every times he passes the store he stops the car, pounds on the window to attract her eye and then waves the neatest little wave imaginable. And then there was the motorman of the Verona trolley out in the wide open spaces, who stopped the car one day to allow an armed passenger to get out and take a shot at a scurrying rabbit. . . . He missed. . . . Also on a Verona car. The conductor stepped off, walked to a nearby house, returned and yelled to the motorman, "She's a little better today."

Good news: A man who lives in Mt. Lebanon has discovered that the 15-cent bus checks, good only on certain lines, fit the quarter slot machines. . . . His wife hit three oranges (eight quarters) with one. . . . If you're smart, you wouldn't play the slot machines with pennies. . . . The odds are 4 to 1 against you. . . . And there seems to be more in town now than ever before. . . .

The Westinghouse people have an automatic garage in East Pittsburgh. . . . It eliminates all hired labor and operates on the principle of a ferris wheel. . . . The other night a motorist was imprisoned in the darned thing for four hours because he took his key out of the lock too soon. . . . He had to wait until another motorist showed up.

We saw a Chinese use the dial telephone in a drug store the other day. First he dialed the two letters of the exchange, then the four numbers. Promptly somebody on the other end answered, and this Chinese (he was a young fellow), asked for Virginia.

He talked with Virginia for a few minutes, hung up and walked out. That's all there was to it, and if you think there was nothing unusual about this incident, you're wrong. Have YOU ever seen a Chinese use the dial phone?

What does a detective or a policeman do when he retires? Well, Homer Crooks, former captain of detectives, is raising canary birds. Louis Leff, former inspector of detectives, helps to run a chain of hotels. John Capp is the chief of police on a Warner lot at Hollywood and sees that the stars' jools aren't stolen too often. Clyde Edeburn is the chief investigator for a merchants' protective association. Sam Free, once a patrolman, is a successful wholesale fruit distributor. Charles Freeborn, Herman Wessell, Dave Lewis, Sylvester Doyle and John Kerr are guards for downtown banks. Tom Cavanaugh (Honest Tom) is a scientific chicken breeder, and William Shore is the head man in a bank. Bob Alderdice, once a patrolman, is the only man in the city's history to become director of public safety. He's city councilman now.

As if David Grafton's arraignment of us for our criticism of Pittsburgh's pickpockets hadn't been enough, another local pickpocket has acted in a manner to invite praise for his fraternity. Probably he wasn't a pickpocket, but whatever he was, he found the wallet of Joe Gabig, of the South Side. The wallet contained $6 and cards. The finder plucked just $2 for his own use and mailed back the rest. Gabig agrees it was worth $2.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., March 14.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Good many papers are poking fun at these Progressives who are meeting in Washington. Well, those are the fellows that are going to run next year's government. Neither Republicans or Democrats can even get excused to go get a drink without the Progressives (the balance of power) sanctioning it. Be a good joke on both parties if these fellows had been right all these years and get a chance to prove it. You watch this Young La Follette. You are going to have a lot of dealings with him in years to come. One thing, these Progressives won't have to be very good to be the best.

Will Rogers

Yours, WILL.

Peace in Sight Between Bancroft and Studio, Friends Believe

By HARRISON CARROLL

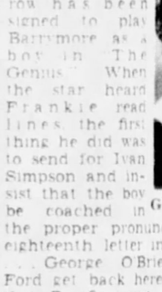
(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, March 14.

Peace is said to be in sight between Paramount and the recalcitrant George Bancroft.

In all fairness, it must be said that the studio refuses to admit this. Friends of Bancroft declare, however, that an agreement has been reached, although no papers are signed.

Bancroft has not made a picture in about six months. The controversy with the studio arose when the star raised the ante for his services, asking a reputed sum of $75,000 a picture. He quoted the same price to the crusading Warner Brothers, and was not taken up.



George Bancroft

The last Bancroft picture was "Scandal Sheet." Since the termination of his Paramount contract, he has been making a personal appearance tour for Publix Theaters.

LATEST GOSSIP

Add to the reasons why film writers go crazy the experience of Bill Conselman and David Butler. After working three days and nights on a story for Will Rogers, they tried it out on Scenarist Percy Heath. "It's a swell story," he admitted. "But we're filming the tail end of it over at Paramount." . . . Bill Boyd and Dorothy Sebastian return next week from their belated honeymoon in Honolulu. . . . According to a well-defined report, the Brothers Halperin, Victor and Edward, are duckering for the screen rights to Eugene O'Neill's "Strange Interlude." A wild rumor says Gloria Swanson is keen to play the heroine. . . . Figuring that the title, "Jackdaws Strut," is obscure, Paramount has changed it to "Virtue's Clothes." . . . John Barrymore is punctilious about his diction, especially his r's. Little Frankie Darrow has been signed to play Barrymore as a boy in "The Genius." When the star heard Frankie read lines, the first thing he did was to send for Ivan Simpson and insist that the boy be coached in the proper pronunciation of the eighteenth letter in the alphabet. . . . George O'Brien and John Ford get back here April 1 from their Pacific jaunt. George starts soon after on the first of two Zane Grey westerns. . . . Hollywood was shocked by the death of F. W. Murnau in a motor accident. The last 12 months have exacted a heavy toll in the film colony—Lon Chaney, Michael Vavitch, Louis Wolheim—and now Murnau. . . .

Gloria Swanson

WHEN STRONG MEN WEPT

A story goes the rounds about the awful experience of a quickie company trying to patch up an African picture to trade on the popularity of "Trader Horn" and other jungle epics. Having bought some genuine African film, the producer sought to jazz up his picture by shooting a few additional thrills with this in view, a hippopotamos was hired from a local menagerie at a cost of $600 a day. A specially prepared mudhole was waiting, the animal when it arrived on a studio back-lot. But no sooner did the hippo sight the mudhole than it made a wadding rush to it and submerged. Once there, the animal resisted the most frantic efforts to make it come to the surface and be photographed.

ALPHONSE AND GASTON COME TO LIFE IN STANLEY

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Lewis Stone and Ben Lyon are doing the Alphonse and Gaston act on the Stanley screen in a picture, "My Past." They are seen as a couple of wealthy pals who go goofy about a little gal with a future. And Bebe Daniels is the gal.

They bow and scrape, figuratively speaking, through the film footage, each insisting the other should have the girl. It is a gesture of courtesy that would even puzzle Emily Post. However, the young Mr. Lyon gets the lady at the finale.

But don't feel sorrow for the middle-aged Mr. Stone. By now he's used to playing the disappointed Romeo. Many, including Greta Garbo, have been the screen ladies who have slipped from his arms to those of another in the last reel.

THIRSTY SUFFERER

Besides, Mr. Lyon suffers too. He is forced to spend a year at hard-drinking in Europe in an effort to forget. But the European spree doesn't effect him any. When you see him 12 months later (cinema time), he's the same nice young man he was at the beginning of the film.

Natalie Moorhead is present. But she doesn't amount to very much. She is just a little wife who gets in the way of unconventional love.

All of the players give rather ordinary performances. But then "My Past," based on the "Ex-Mistress" novel, presents a rather ordinary movie story—a modern love triangle, with some quiet allusions to hidden sinning.

BELLE BAKER 'WOWS' 'EM

Belle Baker, performer of the stage, screen and radio, is the highlight of the stage show, "Three of a Kind." She puts over about four songs with a "wow." One, about a screen hero who is no Don Juan at home, is amusing throughout, suggestive in spots. Other entertainers include a silly comedian, a Punch and Judy show and an ensemble of dancing girls.

Illness kept Dick Powell away and forced Bernie Armstrong into the master of ceremony antics yesterday. Mr. Armstrong also organlogues his usualy weekly contribution. David Broudy salutes St. Patrick in the overture.

ALDINE HAS CHAPLIN FILM SECOND WEEK

Charlie Chaplin's film, "City Lights," which has been getting the glad hand from public and critics alike, opened a second week yesterday in the Aldine. It is a comedy romance in pantomime, with Mr. Chaplin in his familiar hobo makeup, going through numerous episodes, wistful and comic.

Donora Steel Plant To Recall 150 Men

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 14.—F. A. White, general superintendent of the Donora plant of the American Steel and Wire Company, has announced the No. 2 blast furnace will resume March 20, after being banked for three months. About 150 furloughed men will get three days' work weekly.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Lysistrata," old Greek comedy dressed in modern language, coming Monday to the Alvin, has been nicknamed "Lizzie." It has no automobiles but it does have some soldiers. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coburn and Nydia Westman are in the cast.

BEER RUNNING SUSPECT HELD

An alleged beer runner, operating out of Michigan, was arrested today by prohibition agents who met him upon his arrival in an alley in the rear of the 3500 block West Carson street and seized 205 cases of beer.

The man, John Huttig, 34, of 437 North Monroe street, Monroe, Mich., is being held for a hearing before the United States commissioner. A truck, also seized, bore Michigan license plates, according to the agents. The beer was said to have been brought from Detroit.

Real Estate

The Wallace Realty Company, represented by Maurice F. Wallace, leased for John W. Hubbard the three-story brick building at 6375 Penn avenue to the Pittsburgh Electric and Manufacturing Company for a term of 10 years at the approximate rental of $60,000. The lot fronts 56 feet on Penn avenue and extends back 120 feet. The building contains 20,000 square feet of floor space.

A 300-acre farm on the Perry highway, 45 miles north of Pittsburgh, has been sold by the Rev. C. G. Jordan, former state secretary of agriculture, by the Rodgers Realty Company, Slippery Rock. The farm is equipped with two houses, several outbuildings and is underlaid with a vein of coal.

C. C. Hamilton, realtor, has sold to John J. White, 26 lots in the Olympia plan, Fifteenth Ward, for $10,000. Each lot measures 20x100 feet.

A brick house in McPherson boulevard, Fourteenth Ward, has been sold by Fannie H. McFarland to David B. Caldwell for $12,000. The lot is 30x143 feet.

A home in Hazelwood street, Fifteenth Ward, has been purchased by E. Goldstein from the United American Insurance Company for $7,250. The house is built on a lot 49x104 feet.

An improved property on lot 30x130 feet in Duffland street, Twenty-ninth Ward, has been sold to Lawrence A. Sullivan by Christof Weitnauer for $5,700.

Proof-pages on the program for the coming Baltimore convention of the National Association of Real Estate Board to be held May 27 to 30, show that speakers will give much new information in the various divisions of the real estate field. Among the speakers scheduled is Louis Brandt, of Pittsburgh. Brandt's talk is entitled "Modern Sub-Division and Improved Standards of Construction as Aid to Home Financing."

Margaret and Robert S. Marshall have sold to Bertha B. Prichard an improved property in Shady avenue, Seventh Ward. The lot is 65x120 feet.

Applications for building permits follow:

Fourth Ward—M. Dubbs, brick extension, 402-12 Semple street, $8,000. A. Babinez, concrete-block garage, 3237 Juliet street, $500.

Twentieth Ward—C. W. Sterling, concrete-block building, 3037 Chartiers avenue, $1,000.

Twenty-sixth Ward—R. J. Ormslaer, brick, steel dwelling, 265 Kennedy avenue, $4,500.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

(Copyright, 1931, by Daily Mirrory Inc.)

Spinster

Two nights a week from her pathetic dole
She takes the coins that buy her sheer romance;
And, with a movie palace for a goal,
Sets out with prim and half-averted glance;
She gains her seat, as noiseless as a mouse,
And waits the current lover of the screen.
Small lot she cares that half the magic house
Is filled with couples blissful and serene.

The picture starts—the lovely heroine
Is cast aside, and she is in her place,
Eyes wide aglow, she drinks the heady wine
Of one beloved—and shares in each embrace.

(The picture ends—the palace sheds its gloom—
She falters out and seeks her tiny room.)

Gag

It is supposed to have been overheard in one of the Chicago rathskellers where the hoofers dance for "throw money."

A ham who had been laying off for six months was in the place. Between numbers he spoke to the buck-an-wingers.

"Do you think," he began, "that it becomes the dignity of an artist to pick up money thrown at him by the audience?"

"What do you think?" asked one of them of another cabaret dancer, who was listening.

"I never," was the reply, "pay any attention to the first 30 cents."

Heard on the Radio

"I hear that Peggy Joyce is going to get married again."

"Say, listen, wedding bells must sound like an alarm clock to her!"

Nifty

"Gray Shadow," a new "mystery" show, opened at the New Yorker Theater the other night and proved to be a dismal amusement. In it several people are murdered, there is a cemetery, and one of the villains is an embalmer.

Between acts Kelcy Allen said he was glad to see that the show carried its own undertaker.

Solution

"Dear Walter," writes Leo Townsend, "after living next to the Park Central Hotel for a week, and trying to sleep through the cab horns, street cars, police and fire wagons and bon vivants, I think I've solved the Rothstein mystery. He shot himself."

Chanson

Let us kiss and part, my dear;
all our love is spent.
And Finkelstein will soon be here, howling for his rent.
Passions ebb and passions flow;
Life moves on, alack.
Tell me this before you go:
Is the laundry back?

Never weep for any lad; Time will heal the scar.
Leave your number on the pad, so I'll know where you are.
Speed away on dancing feet; do not pause to sigh.
I feel like hell this morning,
Sweet.
Did we kill the rye?

—Donkey Oaty.

Don't We All?

Speaking of fellows who get the most out of Life, says Harry Evans, there was one vaudevillian who got a brand new act and enough extra gags out of one issue alone.

Is your face red?

Similes

Suggested for Mr. Wilstach's dictionary: James Bishop: As inseparable as pure and simple . . . John P. Stack: As unusual as the return of a loan, and he had as many aliases as a hotel register.

Smartest of the Alecks

"With the radio, magazine pages, the lecture platform, occasional drawing rooms—and, at one time, the daily newspaper as his back fence, Alexander Woollcott is the most distinguished gossip o' his time," writes Kay Kennedy in the Detroit Athletic Club News. "That the honor," adds Miss Kennedy, "generally has been accorded another, Walter Winchell, is a problem in public discrimination."

Well, I like that!

What a Relief!

Harry Richman tells of the married couple who were celebrating their tenth anniversary. "My dear," said the husband, "I've a confession to make. I'm not 37 years of age at all. I'm 47."

"And I, too, have a confession," she replied. "I've had asthma for 10 years!"

"Well," he sighed, "that explains everything. All along I thought you were hissing me."

Oop!

He who laughs last—reads the college magazines.

Coincidence

Out of more than 1,750 fire alarm boxes in Manhattan (there is one every two blocks in any direction) there are but two boxes the numbers of which give the exact location: Friximple: Box 624 is at Sixth avenue and Twenty-fourth street. Box 849 is at Eighth avenue and Forty-ninth street.

Isn't he the observing person?

He Got Plenty

Lew Brown, of the late DeSylva, Brown & Henderson trio of show and song writers, just returned from Hollywood and says:

"Thar's gold in them there heels!"

Stew Stuff

Charlie Heaslip, the 65-year-old newspaperman, tells of the alcoholidayer who had accumulated a pair of black eyes in one of those friendly brawls and didn't dare go home with them. Leeching was suggested.

"No good," replied Charlie, "the first three leeches died of delirium tremens."

Things to Worry About

The editor of the Pathfinder prints the following letter:

"I am past 70, and I can remember the word whoopee being used when I was a child. It was used as an expression of surprise and not the present silly meaning—John F. Jones, Beacon, Iowa."

There now!

Suggestion

One of the wags says that Mr. Vallee is giving imitations of famous stage stars, but what he ought to do is give an imitation of Harpo Marx.

Tomb It May Concern

LEON JANNEY NOW ON ENRIGHT STAGE

"Kept Husbands," co-featuring Dorothy Mackaill and Joel McCrea, opened yesterday on the Enright screen. It tells the story of a poor, but honest hero who marries the rich heroine.

The stage show features Leon Janney, boy screen star, who was favorably received in the Stanley. His appearance-in-person act includes impersonations and recitations.

Brian McDonald continues as master of ceremonies. His current revue is titled "Military Ball." Among the entertainers are Bobby Gilbert, comedian and musician; Art Henry and the Samuels Brothers.

An organlogue and short film entertainment completes the bill.

MR. RONALD COLMAN ADVENTURER AGAIN

Ronald Colman will next appear in "The Unholy Garden." Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur are the authors of the new Colman story, which concerns the adventures of a swashbuckling ne'er-do-well in one of the colorful ports of North Africa.

In The Unholy Garden," Colman will forego his native English accent and the mannered social calm that has been characteristic of his work in "Raffles," "Bulldog Drummond" and "The Devil to Pay," and again become the adventurer that he was in "Beau Geste."

The picture will be in production in a few weeks, and is scheduled for release early in July.

'Satan's Daughters' New Academy Show

"Satan's Daughters" will be the new burlesque in the Academy, opening with a Sunday midnight show.

'DANCE, FOOLS, DANCE' ANOTHER GANG WAR AT THE PENN

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Racketeers, gunmen, hijackers and gangsters of all kinds are invading the two-dimensioned world of the screen, and even a tango title like "Dance, Fools, Dance" leads us into the underworld where machine guns and moonshine spell life and death.

George Seibel

Of course, the title has nothing to do with it—they had that left over from some other picture. There are fools in this one, and they dance, that's all. Joan Crawford is a society girl at first, and a newspaper girl at last, after her rich father has gone broke in stocks and falls over dead.

The role is within Joan's limitations as an actress, and she plays it to the limit. It is about the best work she has done.

IT'S A GOOD STORY

Most of the credit for the good story is due to the dramatist, Aurania Rouverol, who put "Dance, Fools, Dance" together. It clicks like a gangster's rod. You never wonder what it's about. You always wonder what's coming next. Those are the signs of a good story.

It is hard to believe that the heroine's brother would call up the big gang leader just when his sister is in the room, and hard to believe that she would answer the phone, but the rest of the story is as plausible as it is exciting—all but the maudlin finish of the last-minute clinch.

It is one of the best of the gangster pictures and gives Joan Crawford an opportunity for some real drama, which she seizes and makes the most of.

DICK LEIBERT'S HIT

But the real hit of the show was made by Dick Leibert, for there wasn't a mother there who wouldn't engage the organist as nursemaid after he has shown his skill in putting a little lost darling to bed for the "Sleepy-Town Express."

And Robert Conche, in a new bob, conducted and played Chopin with poetic spirit, unruffled by the phonetic spelling of the announcement slide.

The Chester Hale Girls are costumed and colored with special artistry this week; Gordon, Reed and King dance with vertiginous dash; Williams and Delaney provide comedy capers that are most amusing, and Yvette Rugel is the prima donna. It's a good stage show with a good picture—thrills and laughs, music and romance.

EDDIE CANTOR'S NEXT TALKING FILM TO BE 'PALMY DAYS'

"Palmy Days" will be Eddie Cantor's second talking picture to follow his successful "Whoopee," according to Samuel Goldwyn. Morrie Ryskind, co-author of "Animal Crackers" and "Strike Up The Band" is co-author of the play with Guy Bolton.

In "Palmy Days" Cantor will appear as assistant to a spiritualist. Although there are two interpolated songs, it will not be a musical picture in the sense that "Whoopee" was.

Goldwyn expects to begin production on the Cantor picture before the end of April.

CLEAN PLAY MARKS PANTHER GAMES

THE BASKETBALL SEASON for the college teams of this city will wind up tonight with Pitt's game against Penn State at State College, Carnegie Tech and Duquesne having already completed their schedules. The Panthers will end the campaign with a record which is most unusual in one respect, and which reflects great credit upon them and their system of play. It demonstrates that in addition to being one of the strongest and fastest teams in the country, a team that has won 19 games and lost only four, they are also one of the cleanest.

Willie Arture

Evidence of this is contained in an impressively low fouling average. Pitt's record for personal fouls during the season is an exceptional one. Frank Carver has compiled some statistics showing that in 23 games played up to date, only 166 fouls have been called against the entire team, which means that for the season as a whole up to the concluding contest tonight the average number of fouls per game charged against Coach Carlson's passers has been only a fraction above seven.

AS FOR INDIVIDUAL marks, it is noteworthy that Willie Arture, a regular guard and playing the kind of game which would appear to make frequent fouling unavoidable, has committed only 28. Early in the season, officials handling Pitt's games remarked upon Arture's fine sportsmanship during the hardest fought contests, and Willie's record bears out their statements.

Here are the individual records of the regulars: W. Kowallis (missed three games), total personal fouls, 13, average per game, .75; Lawry, total 25, average per game, 1.04; Arture, total 28, average per game, 1.21; Smith (missed three games), total 31, average per game, 1.47; Albright, total 34, average per game, 1.49. It is evident that Dr. Carlson teaches his charges sportsmanship and rule obervance as well as basketball.

CLOSE EXAMINATION AND measurement of a shipment of new baseballs of the 1931 type at the offices of the Detroit club bore out the general opinions that there is a sufficient difference between the former and present stitching to spell an advantage for the pitchers.

In the hand the seams of the new ball make gripping easier, and the possibility of a firm purchase being obtained on the pellet by the finger seems considerably greater. Actual measurements taken at Tiger headquarters showed this to be a fact.

FIRST A NEW ball was calipered from a seam on one side to a seam on the other, and then from the smooth surface on one side to an opposite smooth spot. The seam was found to be at all points a thirty-second of an inch higher than the horsehide. A similar measurement of an old ball showed that the seam was only a sixty-fourth of an inch above the leather. Thus the rise or ridge resulting from the higher stitching will give the pitchers just twice as much purchase on the ball as formerly.

Carl Reynolds

PUBLISHED REPORTS THAT list Carl Reynolds, White Sox outfield star, as being still among the major league holdouts, are even farther from the truth than in the case of Al Simmons, of the A's, who denies that he is dissatisfied with his contract, even though he has not yet signed it.

Far from being still a holdout, as he is classified in some newspapers, Reynolds has not only signed his Sox contract but has been training with the Pale Hose in San Antonio since last Wednesday.

A RARE BALL player is Reynolds. He looks certain to be up among the super-greats at no distant day. Recently the pitchers in one American League camp agreed that Simmons is the best hitter in the loop and that Reynolds is the best prospect.

The average outsider would feel inclined to believe that Carl is pretty good right now, in view of the fact that he made 202 hits last year while playing in only 138 games. Only seven other players in the American League made 200 or more hits, and they all played in from 10 to 16 games more than Reynolds.

BIG LEAGUE CLUBS have repeatedly told their patrons that night baseball is not baseball at all and that they would never think of adopting it. It would appear that if they really meant what they said they would have nothing to do with night exhibitions, but would follow the action of the Pittsburgh club, which refused to play by electric light on the coast this spring. But it develops that in Houston, Tex., next Saturday the Giants and White Sox will play the first night game ever participated in by two major league teams. Evidently some clubs are willing to set aside their scruples and go in for something they have denounced just because there is a chance to pick up a few extra dollars.

IN VIEW OF his success in turning the tables on Ernie Schaaf in decisive style and cakewalking his way to the decision over that fighter in New York last night after suffering two consecutive defeats at his hands in 1930, Tommy Loughran probably must be reckoned as having re-established himself among the heavyweight championship contenders. It takes quite a fighter to beat Schaaf in that one-sided style.

When Jack Sharkey stopped Loughran in three rounds a little less than 18 months ago, the new weight which Tommy had put on to invade the heavy division wasn't solid stuff. It was more of a handicap than a help. Since then the Philadelphian has turned a goodly part of that added poundage into muscle, and now, with his rare skill as a boxer, he commands a lot of respect as a possible foeman for the big fellows in the title circle. Unless Sharkey has lost something, Tommy could hardly change the result in a second meeting with the former sailor, but against any of the others in the front row he would have to be conceded at least an even chance.

Joe Miller

HUGO BEZDEK, director of physical education, and other athletic chiefs at Penn State believe that the championship eastern intercollegiate boxing tournament, scheduled for next Friday and Saturday nights at State College, will be the largest tournament ever held by the Centre County school.

There is no disputing the popularity of intercollegiate boxing. The Penn State-Army meet last Saturday drew 7,000 spectators, and in all probability the eastern intercollegiates will attract many more.

THE STATE COLLEGE meet will not be without local interest. Joe Miller, of Wilkinsburg, will be a contestant, and will try to fill the shoes of an intercollegiate champion for Penn State. When Leo Houck, boxing coach of the Lions, had to select a boxer to take the place of Marty McAndrews, intercollegiate 175-pound champion and captain of the State ring team last year, he gave Miller the nod. In his first intercollegiate bout Joe defeated a North Carolina opponent to clinch the meet for State. The following week he lost a decision to a Navy foeman, but last Saturday he boxed a draw with Coughlin, of Army, enabling State to get a tie in the meet with West Point. Miller has won his spurs in football at Penn State, having seen considerable action in the Lion backfield during the 1928 and 1930 seasons.

GAMES TONIGHT.

Syracuse at Pittsburgh.
London at Cleveland.

By CARL W. SHATTO

The Yellow Jackets will be skating on thin ice when they meet the Syracuse Stars at Duquesne Garden tonight in an International Hockey League game that will see the locals' remaining home schedule cut in half.

Not that the skating surface at the Craig street arena is to be thinner than heretofore—it's just that since the Schooley icemen were drenched in a dope upset at Detroit Thursday night their chances of getting into the league's championship series is so slender that another setback is likely to crowd them right out of the picture.

The last-place Stars haven't beaten the Jackets since the second game of the season, last November, but if some very recent history is repeated the tailenders will get all pepped up and smack the locals down here tonight. When the Schooley skaters invaded Detroit on Thursday, they boasted a record of seven straight wins over the Olympics. And what did the Olympics do in their final fight? They handed the Jackets a 2-1 wallop that just about knocked 'em out of the playoffs.

FRASER GAME

But Pittsburgh's dark cloud is not without its silver lining. Gordy Fraser, defense ace of the locals and generally regarded as the best backfielder in the circuit, plans to tape up a broken hand and get back into harness tonight. Fraser was crippled in the Cleveland game here last Saturday. He did not play in Detroit, and under ordinary circumstances he would not play again this season. Because of his mates' precarious position and rather sorry plight, however, he is determined to risk more serious injury and take his crippled hand, protected by a special brace, into battle.

Fraser bolsters the Jackets' morale as well as their actual playing strength, and his return to the lineup will result in the locals being installed as heavy favorites to win tonight.

STARS PLAY WELL

In recent games the Stars, on one scoring spree after another, have been averaging about five goals per game. The Pittsburgh forwards will have to keep peppering the Syracuse cage if the Jackets' playoff hopes are to be kept alive.

London, now in a fine position to crowd Pittsburgh out of the title series, meets the Indians in

SPORT SHORTS

NEW YORK.—(AP.)—The indoor track season comes to a brilliant end tonight with the Knights of Columbus games in Madison Square Garden and the women's national championships at Newark. Seven American indoor champions and six intercollegiate titleholders have entered the K. of C. meet, with the Columbian mile as the feature. The field includes Ray Conger, Leo Lermond, Gene Venzke and George Bullwinkle.

CORAL GABLES, Fla.—R. L. Ottke, of Pittsburgh, participated in the pro-amateur competition over the Miami-Biltmore Country Club course here yesterday. He was paired with Bill Mehlhorn, New York pro, and they finished with a card of 42-43—85. The event was won by Clarence Hackney, pro, and George P. Boyajian, amateur, both of Atlantic City, N. J., who led with 35-38—73.

HOT SPRINGS, Va.—Diana Fishwick, British golf champion, will make her final appearance on American courses here next week, in company with Marjorie White, a member of the same party, which sails for home a week from today. Miss Fishwick telephoned from Sedgefield, N. C., last night that she and Miss White will motor here from that city tomorrow, and will remain at the homestead until next Thursday.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa.—Collegiate football may be over for retiring Capt. Johnny Knapic, of Geneva, but the fleet halfback still retains grid memories. Most of them are very pleasant; some, however, are painful. It is because of the latter that Knapic entered Providence Hospital for an appendix operation.

CHICAGO.—(AP.)—Indiana led the field in placing semi-finalists in the Big Ten wrestling championships at the University of Chicago last night, six of its grapplers winning their bouts. Michigan had five, Illinois four, Iowa and Chicago three each, Minnesota, Northwestern, Wisconsin and Purdue, two each, and Ohio State one.

NEW YORK.—(AP.)—With all except a few of the top ranking American stars mysteriously missing, the American indoor tennis championships open today in the Seventh Regiment Armory. Jean Borotra, French Davis Cup veteran, holds most of the spotlight.

NEW YORK.—(AP.)—Whatever case the New York State Athletic Commission was able to muster against Billy Petrolle and King Tut, a pair of lightweights under investigation on suspicion of faking a recent fight in Madison Square Garden, was closed yesterday with no other announcement than that the boys would be paid their wages for the match.

BELLEAIR, Fla.—(AP.)—Mrs. Melvin Jones, Chicago, won the Belleair women's golf championship, defeating Mrs. Helen B. Stetson, Philadelphia, 3 and 2.

ORMOND BEACH, Fla.—(AP.)—J. Gilbert Hall won the Florida East Coast tennis championship here yesterday when he defeated Marcel Rainville, Canadian ace, in the final, 6-3, 6-4, 9-11, 6-4.

GREENSBORO, N. C., March 14.—(AP.)—Kathleen Garnham, Liverpool golfer, led her British companions and their American opponents in the first 18 holes of the annual Sedgefield Country Club spring medal tournament yesterday. She turned in an 80. Miss Garnham, of the Naze Club, who reached the fifth round in the British championship last season, scored 48 and 41 to master the field.

Miss Fishwick, who defeated Glenna Collett, in the final last year, scored a 90.

Sport Vignettes

Frank Klaus, of Braddock, recently returned from Miami, Fla., where he was one of a group of former champions invited to attend the Primo Carnera-Jim Maloney fight last week as the guest of William Dwyer, the hockey magnate, says the Carnera gang pulled a fast one on Maloney by bandaging Primo's right side, whereas his injured rib was on the left side . . . Maloney fell for the gag and kept pounding the bandage.

Phil Goldstein, local lightweight, pulled the same gag in his first bout with Tony Herrera at the Meyers Bowl a few seasons ago. . . He also had a bad rib and taped up the wrong side to throw Herrera off the track . . . Herrera kept shooting at the target until he finally struck Phil low and the local man won on a foul and a return bout resulted later, both battles drawing large gates. . . The Maloney people partly evened up for the Carnera hoax, however, according to Klaus, former middleweight champion, by stalling around before the bout got under way, quibbling about the gloves, bandages, etc., to give the novocaine that had been shot into Carnera's bad side a chance to wear off, which it finally did along about the seventh round, leaving the big Italian in painful distress.

Two of the former champions in the Dwyer party were Abe Attel and Johnny Kilbane, to whom Abe lost the featherweight title years and years ago. . . They had quite a time of it reminiscing about the olden days. . . Klaus was impressed by the fine physical condition of Battling Nelson, former lightweight king, who, he says, looked much better than when he was around here more than a decade ago.

A match is in the making between the Pitt boxing team and that of the Y. M. H. A. at the instigation of Phil Goldstein, Y. M. H. A. coach, who has taken up the matter with Joe Orsini, the Panther mentor . . . . . Doc Munster conveys the information that his old pal, Joe Tipman, former Baltimore boxing star, who fought Terrible Terry McGovern, George Dixon, Young Corbett, Packey McFarland, Joe Gans, Tommy Feltz and other notables in their prime, and scored a knockout over McGovern, wants to show his young bantamweight ace, Al Martin, of Baltimore, here.

REFEREE NAMED FOR NET PLAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Hallock C. Sherrard, veteran local tennis devotee, has accepted appointment as official tournament referee of the forty-third annual Western Pennsylvania net championships, slated for the Stanton Heights Golf Club courts the week of June 20. Formal announcement to the foregoing effect was made by General Chairman Frank S. Smith yesterday at the weekly luncheon conclave of tourney moguls. It was concurrently stated by Smith that David I. McCahill, donor of the famed McCahill West Penn men's singles trophy and arbiter of the 1929 and 1930 district titular events, will serve as a member of the General Tournament Committee, complete personnel of which will be decided upon in the very near future.

Another important bit of news—this in line with the avowed determination of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association to increase the out-of-town group in attendance at the Steel City contesting this year—has it that arrangements for special rates for visiting players have been accomplished at one of the large apartment hotels of the East End sector. This feature of accommodation, neglected for perhaps the last decade, is expected to enhance the outside popularity of the Western Pennsylvania jousting no little.

GUEST LEADS PIN EVENT

Harry Guest, with 653, moved into first place in the singles event of the tri-state tenpin tournament at the Forward Alleys yesterday, with Bert Lamb winning the runner-up position by rolling 651.

The Fintex No. 1 five-man team knocked down 2,858 pins to grab top place in that competition, the Ko-Ko-Mo Kids crashing 2,814 for second place.

The leadership in the doubles was unchanged, Guest and Harry Votel bowling over 1,175 pins to move into second place for the day's best performance.

The high score for the tournament was rung up when George Miller, of the Allegheny Squirrels' team, rolled nine consecutive strikes for a single game score of 273. Yesterday's scores:

The stage will be set tonight for the windup next Wednesday of the annual W. P. I. A. L. championship elimination tournament with the playing of the second semi-final game, between Duquesne and New Castle, in the Pitt Stadium. The winnah, as Mr. Joe Humphries so vociferously puts it, will battle Scott High, of North Braddock, for the title.

The first semi-final struggle was an event of last evening, and witnessed the downfall of the defending champion, New Kensington, Scott winning a decisive 33-19 ball game.

BATTLE PROMISED

Tonight's battle promises to be just that. Both teams were impressive in their first and second round tussles, Duquesne winning handily from Coraopolis and McDonald, and New Castle from more formidable opposition, Ambridge and Monessen. Both of the Castle triumphs were tacked to the wall by one-point margins, which is as good as a million when it comes to paying off.

Duquesne will have an advantage in height and weight tonight, but hardly in speed, although the Dukers are not lacking in that very necessary adjunct. New Castle is very fast, in fact, speed and brains is the main forte of Phil Bridenbaugh's Lawrence Countians.

Duquesne will present an individual star of great merit in Capt. Al Servick, who has been one of the outstanding forwards of the tourney. New Castle's ace has been its center, Lasky, a fine jumper, clever ball handler and, to date, a good scorer.

Strange enough, these two teams clashed in the semi-final round a year ago, Duquesne winning, 22 to 14.

Exit Ken High

Friday the Thirteenth lived up to the limit of its hard luck rep as far as New Kensington was concerned last night. Before the largest crowd that has been in the Stadium all year, for either college or high school entertainment, a crowd of about 4,000, Scott High, Johnny Reed's crack North Braddock entry, dumped the defending league champ in decisive fashion by 33 to 19.

Kensington's famous last-period rally failed to materialize last night. The champions trailed from the very start, and except for a spurt in the second period, were forced to swallow the not inconsiderable dust kicked up by the flying footsies of the Scotts.

SCOTT TAKES LEAD

Scott's five-man attack carried the Section VIII team away to a 9-to-1 lead in the first quarter. Tomko, Ferguson, Bache and Johnny Krutullis, destined to be the outstanding performer of the ball game, each accounting for a field goal. Forward Krisliet, who was the shining light in the Kensington defeat, saved his team from a shutout with a foul. Capt. Whitey Wilson, who was well covered by the Scott defense, missed four chances at the foul line.

Two field goals by Krisliet, one by Wilson and another by Babe Dayoub, and a foul by Susek enabled Kensington to match the nine points rung up by Scott in the second period. Scott spoiled the rally by counting three times,

Says Nick Altrock

Baseball's Comedian

BILOXI, Miss., March 14.—Bill Terry finally decided there was better prospects playing first base for the Giants than selling apples at retail in Memphis, Tenn. That makes only about a dozen holdouts left, and a month from now they will be so anxious to get their names on the dotted line, they would even autograph a polka dot tie.

Nick Altrock

Well, the spring training has certainly helped the Phillies a lot. Yesterday against the Robins they made eight errors. That is playing in midseason form for the Phils.

Our Washington club is starting off its exhibition games with the Baltimore Orioles. We always pick out Birds to begin on, and then work up to someone our size.

PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 14—The two Pirate squads are set to stage the last intra-club contest of the training season this afternoon. Tomorrow the Regulars are down for a setto with the Portland Club of the Pacific Coast League, the battle to be fought on the Paso Robles Park.

The Portland outfit, managed by the redoubtable Spencer Abbott, is likely to give Ens' first team a hot argument, but the Buccos figure they will take the measure of the Beavers. This game will be the finish of the competitive play of the Pittsburgh camp, the well-conditioned squad being scheduled to leave for San Francisco Monday night. A single practice on Monday will mark the breakup of the camp.

YANS TRIP PASO ROBLES

The Pirate Yanigans handed a trouncing to the Paso Robles Club yesterday, the final score being 18 to 2. Manager Ens put a stop to the travesty in the eighth inning. The contest was played for the benefit of the local milk fund, and it drew a liberal sum for the charity. The Pittsburgh skipper gave his regulars a rest for the afternoon, while the Hooligans sported themselves on the greensward.

Walter Leverenz, former White Sox southpaw, who has a ranch near here, pitched two rounds against the Buccos. Leverenz, who was in the International League last summer, has decided to retire from the game after more than 20 years of participation.

Manager Ens gave a grand thrill to Herber Twisselman, a high school pitcher. Ens put him on the mound for the Yans in the last round and the lad came through in a fine manner.

ADAM, PAUL WORK

Adam Comorosky and Paul Waner were in the focus of attention as they indulged in their first workout of the season. Commy caused a big scene when Pitcher Andy Bednar let fly with a fast ball that struck the Polish flyer flush between the shoulder blades. Commy fell at the plate, but was able to resume practice. The blow on his somewhat soft body was a painful one, but Adam came up smiling as his pals handed him the merry razz. The coal miner from the Wilkes-Barre regions is one of the snappiest members of the team and his presence here will help the morale.

Larry French is rounding into shape nicely and he is believed to be almost safely in the fold.

MANAGER JEWEL ENS

French, holdout pitcher of the Pirates, confers with Manager Ens upon his arrival in the training camp at Paso Robles, Cal. That was on Wednesday, and he hasn't signed yet. However, he's not powwowing with a chip on his shoulder, as may be seen from the happy smiles of player and boss. Larry is expected to quit the holdout ranks today or tomorrow.

on fouls by Tomko and Bache, and maintained a 12-10 advantage at the intermission.

Again in the third period, Scott's fast attack functioned to splendid advantage, the Reedmen pulling away to boost their lead to nine points at 25-14 as the final period opened. Krutullis sent two goals swishing through the net in this session, Tomko, Bache and Kuno each counting once. Krisiet's two fouls and Bell's field goal gave Kensington four points.

WILSON STOPPED

Whitey Wilson tried manfully to engineer the Kensington spurt, which carried the team to a triumph over New Brighton in the second round, in the last quarter, but he was forced to shoot from far out and succeeded in clicking only once. Krisiet added a trio of markers at the charity line, but Scott was still hitting. Tomko, Ferguson and Krutullis banging in goals.

Krisiet, with two field goals and six out of seven fouls, gathered in 10 points to lead both teams in the scoring. Susek, who by the way, wore No. 13, was banished on the four-personal foul rule, and was followed to the showers very closely by Vic Bache, Scott's fine center. The lineup:

Hammer Is Elected Gun Club Prexy

A large attendance marked the annual meeting of the Wilkinsburg Gun Club. The shooting committee, under Lew B. Fleming, has in contemplation some unique ideas which the Wilkinsburg club will put into effect in their program.

The election of officers was as follows: Howard G. Hammer, president; Dr. E. R. Rameley, secretary; S. B. West, treasurer; J. Painter, Jr., governing committee; G. E. Painter, finance committee, and L. B. Fleming, shooting committee.

Loughran Easily Wins Over Schaaf

NEW YORK, March 14.—(AP.)—Tommy Loughran, former light heavyweight champion, easily outpointed Ernie Schaaf, his blond heavyweight nemesis from Boston, in a brilliant 10-round feature bout last night. Loughran weighed 182½, Schaaf, 200. There were no knockdowns.

AVALON JUNIORS COP

The Allegheny County school basketball championship was won by Avalon Junior High which last night defeated East McKeesport High, 36-14, in the deciding game. The lineup:

Avalon		McKeesport

ST. JOHNS, Fla., March 14.—(Special.)—The mutuels on the seven races at the St. Johns Park race track yesterday paid a total of $140.50.

COLLEGE STARS ORGANIZE

By JULIUS LEVIN

Their college basketball careers completed, six of Pittsburgh's outstanding varsity stars have banded together under the name of the College All-Stars for the purpose of making an extensive exhibition tour of the tri-state district. The roster of the team is composed of Eddie Baker and Willie Arture, of Pitt; George Nease, of Carnegie Tech, and Ganzy Benedict, Snabs Parry and Brud Stephens, all of Duquesne University.

Eddie Baker

All six have stood out conspicuously for their respective alma maters during their three years of varsity basketball, and will prove a strong attraction for the many first-class amateur and independent clubs operating in this vicinity.

John Sullivan, of Homestead, former manager of the Homestead Ackermans in the old Allegheny County League, has taken over the reins of the College All-Stars, and is ready to hear from all teams in the tri-state district desiring this attraction. Call Homestead 0717 or write John Sullivan, 139 Eighth avenue, Homestead, Pa.

Tonight's independent card is a very light one. St. Michael's invades North Side Community House for a West Penn League contest with Frank Stansbury's passers. Two games are listed in the Homestead Library League, the Baraccas playing the Jednotas and the Hilks opposing the Hoffmans. The Penn Cadets play at Hill Top Y Reserves, and Brentwood at Soho Community House in Metropolitan League contests.

The W. W. Hoyles play at St. Joseph's Lyceum.

Washington County Titles Are Decided

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 14.—Peters Township High won the Class III title of Washington County here last night, defeating West Bethlehem, 28 to 23. McDonald High captured the Class II championship, defeating Cecil High, 22 to 19, and Canonsburg High copped the Class I title, defeating California, 43 to 25.

SOUTH HILLS BOWS

South Hills High natators lost to Allegheny High, 31-28, in a swimming meet yesterday.

Between Rounds

Mike Tyborski, of the Duquesne University varsity boxing team, has filed his entry as a featherweight for the Allegheny Mountain Association A. A. U. senior championship tournament, to be staged in the Moose Temple week after next.

Sunny Jim McVey, Negro light-heavyweight, of Braddock, and Bruno Sala, of Donora, who is back home from New York on a visit, have been matched to box the six-round semi-final to the Tiger Joe Randall-Jimmy Belmont battle in McKeesport next Thursday night.

Both Eddie Anderson and Eddie Brannon are talking about scoring a knockout in their 10-round return bout in Motor Square Garden Monday night. Anderson won their first clash in the same ring recently by a narrow margin.

The Mickey Duris-Sammy Harris show at Johnstown, scheduled for next Monday night, has been set back one week because of a cut suffered by Duris against Billy Holt here last Monday night.

JIMMY THOMAS WINS WINDUP DEBUT EASILY

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

Jimmy Thomas, of the Hill, moved up to take his place alongside Jackie Rodgers as a Negro main-bout boxing attraction for Pittsburgh promoters at the Moose Temple last night. He did it by taking into camp the experienced Benny Schwartz, of Baltimore, who has battled the best in the business, and how he took Benny was nobody's business.

Thomas was receiving his baptism of fire as a main-bouter, and he delivered the goods in such swell fashion that Schwartz won only one round, the fifth, and held his own in only two more, the first and fourth. In all of the others, Thomas won as he pleased, belting Schwartz at long range or as the latter rushed. In fact, the harder Benny tried, and every now and then he put on a rushing splurge, the worse he fared against Thomas' hard-punching counters.

SCORES EARLY KNOCKDOWN

The Negro rocked his foe a number of times and dropped him for no count and fell over him against the ropes as the bell rang to end the opening round. It was this momentary knockdown that evened the opening session for Jimmy, after Benny had set a fast starting pace with little effective punching being done on either side.

Beginning with the second round, Thomas' punching was so much harder than Benny's that he crashed right through the latter's defense with both fists. Benny temporarily checked the tide to box his way to an even break in the fourth round, and, in the fifth, went out and took the play away from Jimmy to score his only winning round on his boxing.

In the sixth, Thomas broke up this boxing attack with his hard counters, and, from then on, while Benny made matters interesting with his maneuvering and flashes of generalship, there was no question of the outcome. Schwartz could not hit hard enough to hurt Thomas, and the latter was constantly hurting Benny and forcing him to break ground and cover. And, through it all, Jimmy paced himself beautifully over the 10 rounds. It was a fine start as a headliner for Thomas, who appears to be headed somewhere. He scaled 119¾ pounds against 116½ for Schwartz at 3 p. m.

WARNER BEATEN, GETS WIN

Pete Mazzeo, of Cleveland, 121, subbing on 24 hours' notice for Mose Butch, of Oakland, outboxed and outhit Johnny Warner, of Clairton, 124, in every round but the fifth, in which he coasted and was warned by the referee to refrain from tying up his opponent in the clinches, yet the decision went unanimously to Warner. The award got a well-deserved panning from the fans.

After a rushing start in the opening round of the second bout, Young Joe Walcott, Washington (Pa.) Negro, 144¼, faded away to a whisper, and took a one-sided shellacking from Southpaw Joey Spiegel, of Uniontown, 141½. Ross Fields, another southpaw, from Weirton, W. Va., 117¼, pasted Jackie Wilson, Negro, of Homewood, 121, to a farethewell in the six-round opener.

Al Grayber refereed all bouts and Frank Brown and Jock Simco were the judges.

It was announced that Jocko Walters, of Springfield, O., Negro middleweight knockout puncher, will meet Pal Silvers, of New York, in the main bout at the Moose next Friday night.

NO. 5—TONY PIET.

PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 14.—Anthony Francis Pietruszka is the obscure son of an obscure steel worker of Berwick, Pa., but in the years to come you may hear a lot about the unpretentious young man with the pretentious name.

If you like baseball well enough to break out into a fever that will send you a thousand miles away to a training camp at your own expense, you are likely to make the grade, especially if you are gifted with ability.

Anthony Francis was 5 years old when his Polish dad and mother decided to face the West. The father was employed as a riveter for the American Car and Foundry Company at Berwick, but there came the offer of a more lucrative position with the Pressed Steel Car Company in Chicago and it was accepted.

Chicago, like the hard coal section, being a hotbed of baseball interest, Anthony grew up in the lore of the game, each succeeding year adding fuel to his desire to be a player. And so we eventually find him in his high school days in South Chicago. The lure of the diamond at this time stole him from school and he acquired a job. And, while other boys spent their money, Anthony Francis started a bank account.

PAYS WAY TO CAMP

Came the spring and with it the heavily-laden sports pages, stressing the teams in training. Anthony Francis could stand it no longer. Securing a leave of absence and withdrawing his bank account, the lad traveled first class into the heart of the Texas League.

"I knew the Texas League was class A, but I thought I would give it a whirl," said Anthony.

So he alighted in Fort Worth, and, going to the ball orchard, found Jakey Atz engaged in the quite impossible feat of watching 75 ball players in action.

Anthony was outnumbered, but it would take more than numbers to scare him now. He boldly asked Manager Jakey for a tryout.

MAKES GOOD IN TEXAS

Atz admired the pluck of the 18-year-old boy, but truthfully he did not have another uniform in the baseball shebang and he had to disappoint the young traveler. But the boy was not discouraged. It was only an hour's ride to Dallas and there were only 45 in the Dallas squad, and Manager Bert Ellison was quick to give the Polish kid a uniform. He worked out with Dallas for three weeks, was released with 25 others, and then landed a berth with Corsicana, of the Lone Star League. He led his club in everything and was drafted by Waco. Anthony Francis was farmed out to Munroe, of the Cotton States League, in 1929, and Waco recalled him after a big season. He was a luminary at second base for Waco last season. Fort Worth stepped in and bought him two days after the season closed and then the Pirates purchased him from Fort Worth.

NAME CUT TO PIET

And somewhere in this course of events the name of Anthony Francis Pietruszka shrank to Tony Piet, and it is just as well for those who serve and read the newspapers.

"I love the game well enough to be away from home six months of the year," said Tony, "but when I get back in October I am tongue-tied for a week trying to speak Polish to my mother and dad."—Charles J. Doyle.

LOCAL PINSTERS SCORE POORLY

BUFFALO, March 14.—Pittsburgh pinsters, who made their debut in the annual tournament of the American Bowling Congress here last night, will have to look to the matinee events of today for pin money, as each of the four Pittsburgh teams failed signally in trying to hammer out a prize-winning score.

The highest Pittsburgh count was 2,530, put over by P. & L. E. R. R. A. A. No. 1. The No. 4 railroaders shot 2,424, the No. 3 hit 2,441 and No. 2 fell to 2,378. H. Rider, through his games of 194, 181 and 182, proved the outstanding star of the Pittsburgh delegation.

While these boys were operating on the timber with poor results, two outfits from Erie were wallowing in the depths, Blue Birds, of the American Sterilizer, puncturing only 2,348, and Eckerd's Cut Rates getting 2,352.

The expected crash into first division of five-men teams failed to materalize. D. Graf and Sons, of Kalamazoo, winner of the championship last year at Cleveland, relinquished the title when they rolled only 2,658. The Pittsburghers' scores:

PITT, TARTANS, DUKES TEAMS TO BE BUSY

Two boxing bouts, the grand finale of the tri-state district court campaign and a swimming meet between Carnegie Tech's varsity splashers and Wooster College at Wooster, O., comprise the collegiate sport card for tonight.

Early this morning, Coach Doc Carlson took his Pitt Panthers off to State College, there to wind up the 24-game season with a return clash with Penn State. The contest marks the last varsity appearance of the Panther co-captains, Eddie Baker and Willie Arture. A victory for Pitt tonight means a record of 20 victories against only four setbacks.

BOXERS IN ACTION

All three of the local varsity boxing teams are in action this evening. Pitt and the Dukes battle in the Duke gym and Carnegie Tech's mitt-slingers will swap jabs and wallops with Wash-Jeff's ambitious Presidents.

The meeting between the Panthers and Dukes will be the first varsity encounter for either team. The Pitt lineup has not yet been announced, Coach Joe Orsini being undecided as to which of his hopefuls to use. The Dukes intend to depend on Fred Vitulla in the 115-pound class; E. Vernaccini in the 125-pound division; R. Denmark in the 135-pound bout; George Chako

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Isn't It Possible to Have Good Time at Home?

Home! What does it mean to you? What does it mean to the average American of this whirlwind, whoopee - making Twentieth Century?

Is it just a way station—a place to snatch a bite of food or a few hours' sleep—to hang your hat between "dates?"

That's the way the American home looks to the old world eyes of Minna Seyel. Minna Seyel, with her memories of quiet hands that created and mended . . . of quiet evenings filled with friendly books and friendly talk—happy evenings. So happy that she hated to leave them, for fear she might miss some of their beauty and meaning.

Sees Unhappiness

"These silly girls!" she cries. "Always thinking they must run out to the dance or the show! Always making home something like a cheap boarding house! Always seeking for excitement! Never still! Never happy! Never satisfied! Always wanting to be some place they're not!"

Do you fit that picture?

"Dear Miss Martin:

"Please first excuse me for taking up your time with this letter. But I feel that I must write it. You see I have only been in your America for 11 months, and there are things that puzzle me about it. Things that seem not quite happy.

"Where in the world is the American home? It seems that there is not any, really. All is like haste and fever all the time. I hear always about these girls who fuss about not being popular, about not being able to run out every night for a 'good time.' Is there no good time to be had at home? It was so in my home in Europe. There, home was a place to enjoy. We did not worry if we did not have 'something to do every night.'

"I understand a little when I read in your column about these so silly mothers who pick up clothes, and work—being happy to 'help their daughters.' Those mothers, I think, should have the blame of the nation for not teaching their daughters what a home can be, and what a place they can have in it. It is all like making the home just a cheap house for the children.

Loved Old Home

"My home in Europe was not poor. We had two maids. But from the time I was ten years old, I must darn all my own stockings and keep my own clothes in order. And if I left something on a chair, I was called back to pick it up and put it where it belonged. My mother wanted that I learn what my place in the home was . . . my part of making it fine and happy. And I was proud of that part I took. She taught me like that.

"And she always had time to sit down and talk with us children and from when we were very small, she put the liking for good books in us. Through the long winters, we sat with friendly talk and mending and reading, every night, having a few neighbors in perhaps. Such a happy time as we had! We could refuse "dates" because we wanted to stay at home and not miss anything.

"But here it seems so different. So hurried. Like everything must be a mad race for excitement . . . for 'something different' . . . it seems as if nobody was really happy or satisfied, but that they must be all racing to where they are not. Is it that they are afraid to spend an evening with themselves? Sometimes I think so. It is too bad.

"My mother and father were both very strict that we take care of our own rooms and fix our own clothes when they needed fixing.

"When it was hard for my brother to get his Latin, my mother took it up and studied it with him and helped him, and he got through with the best marks for it. It was always that way. We helped each other. And our home was a place we loved.

Seems Strange Here

"But here it seems so strange to me. Home is just a place to eat and sleep so often, and get away from as soon as you can. That seems to me sad. It does not seem that life can be very real, or that it can be happy, when people are like that. I think it was better in my home in the Old Country. People must be quiet, now and then, to be happy . . . to let life mean something. To think and find out beauty. Do you not think so?

"Well, now that I read my letter over, I think it is not a bit interesting, but I send it to you anyway. Maybe it will not bore you as I think. And I thank you for reading it. And for your column, that shows us a little beauty every day.

"MINNA SEYEL."

Bore me, my dear? Not in a million years!

I think it is a beautiful letter. What a happy home yours must have been! Warm and joyous and friendly. Full of work and fun and peace . . . and with its foundations set firm on the soil of genuine growth and reality. I wonder just how many modern "jazz babies" have ever known the deep satisfactions you found within its simple walls.

'FOR THE SPORT'

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"Pour le Sport," that so-sheek Paree says. And to be "chic" for the sport it must be suitable, timely, jos' rrright for the particular sport! That is very important. If you do not wish Madame Fashion to put up her so-beautifully-taken-care-of hands at you. My word, how could you sleep that night in your pajama top, or your hand-made nighty, if you had gone golfing in the wrong sort of costume that day! Could you eat your spinach, brown bread, and rhubarb—no butter!—with the black cloud on your mind of having worn last year's beach shoes with THIS year's suit, or a nose-veil hat where a beret should have been.

But thanks to something or other, the bars are down in ONE sport! The Love Game. Madame Fashion leans back here, and is herself. She relaxes—and puts on her old felt slippers and smiles and takes a nap.

Everything is suitable in the game where a bit of heart is the puck—the ball, the fish, the shuttlecock. What—WHAT so fetching, so winning, so right, as a cloudy lace frock like an inverted parasol, shaded lights and the game played indoors? You can golf in shorts, Roman sash, and no hat on your shining hair, left uncovered to immesh the enemy, and be as chic as a new thirty-dollar bonnet. You can punch the bag in flowered chiffon and fox fur. You can go a-fishing in a silk frock and patent kids. You can go "dumb bell" in a Sunday afternoon gown. You can play tennis in the parlor, or badminton, as I said before, in lace and diamonds.

And the whole thing is oh, so proper. So jos' rrright! So suitable! So timely! Dress for the game of love—in just anything you like that looks lovely upon you. They even say that a fetching little kitchen frock—with the lady making something like chicken-and-dumpling between sets, is terribly striking to the heart of the other player.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

CORRECT MANNERS

Walking Etiquette

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My fiance and I have been unable to settle a small disagreement concerning "walking etiquette." He says that when a couple round a corner it is the woman's place to change to the "inside" of the walk. I think he should step behind me and get to the outside. Please tell us which is proper.

MISS F. H.

You are right. The gentlemen should do the changing of position.

Birth Announcements

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. How soon after the birth of a baby should announcements be sent to friends?

2. What is the correct form of announcement? Is it all right to send the customary printed announcements?

M. S.

1. As soon as some member of the family finds it convenient.

2. The best form of birth announcement is the use of Mr. and Mrs. (engraved), with the tiny baby card attached to it. On the small card is engraved the name of the baby, and the date of the birth. The card is attached to the larger card with very narrow white ribbon.

You may, if you wish, send another kind of announcement, but be sure that it really is in good taste . . . not one of the stunt announcements that register such fundamentally poor taste.

Solving a Problem

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly solve a problem for us? We are three girls and we all live at the same house. A young man calls quite often—we never know when he is coming as he doesn't make a date with any of us. He comes to play cards and pass the evening. When he leaves who should accompany him to the door?

A. W.

I can't see any way to carry out the young man's impartiality except by all three going with him to the door when he leaves.

Superfluous Words

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it correct for a fiance, when introducing his fiancee at a dance to say, "This is my fiancee, Miss So and So." Also, how should a girl introduce her fiance?

These words "my fiancee" seem to me to be unnecessary when introducing at a dance. Will you kindly help me out so that I may know whether I am right or wrong? M. B.

It isn't necessary, when making this introduction at a dance, to use the words "fiancee" or "fiance," unless the couple wish to.

Removing Particles of Food

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A says that it is proper to use the napkin when removing a particle of food from the chin. B contends that the handkerchief should be used in place of the napkin. Please advise who is correct. READER.

A is correct. The napkin should be used, when we wish to remove a particle of food from the chin.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

Madge Is Uneasy by Presence of Charles Owen

I must not let Helena Brixton see the panic I had experienced when I saw Charles Owen among the guests at Mary's party. That was the thought which steadied me as she followed my eyes to the door through which her husband's half brother had just gone with Dicky and the college students.

"Didn't Charlie come over to speak to you?" she asked concernedly. "He usually is so punctilious."

"I fancy Mr. Graham hurried him over into the other apartment," I said, forcing a smile. "It is almost the dinner hour we named, and my husband, like most men, is getting uneasy."

"Aren't they all alike?" She laughed comfortably, and Lillian, who, I knew, shared my uneasiness concerning Charles Owen, put a quick imperative query.

"You didn't expect your brother-in-law to be here, did you, Helena?"

Mrs. Brixton widened her eyes apprehensively.

"No, I didn't," she answered. "That is, he didn't say positively he couldn't be back, but he was pretty sure. Does it make any difference in your plans? I wouldn't have brought him if I had——"

"Don't talk nonsense!" Lillian adjured her affectionately. "Madge is too experienced a hostess not to have provided an extra place. Besides, we expected him, anyway. Don't you remember, you said he might be here? That was enough for Madge."

As I smilingly confirmed Lillian's dictum; I thanked my particular little joss that Philip Veritzen was the type of host who provided for emergencies, and that he had one or two more theater tickets in reserve if our plans should be changed. But it was not the social adjustment which was bothering me. That was an easy thing. But I could not rid my mind of the distrust—amounting to fear—which I felt every time I saw or heard of the spectacular adventurer who was Samuel Brixton's half brother. I knew, too, that the information given us by Prince Georges as to Owen's connection under a Treek name with the secret society which had tried to assassinate him, was not at the real root of my fear of the man. If I had had no other cause to distrust him, I think I should have shrugged my shoulders with the philosophical reflection that no one could understand foreign intrigues and conspiracies anyway—or determine the right of them. But I had reason to fear—or so I amagined—that this man and his half brother Samuel Brixton, former friend and business associate of Marion's dead father—were concocting some unsavory financial scheme behind the ostensible offer of reparation which they had made upon their first visit to the farm, and which Lillian and I had declined to have Marion consider until she should become of age. I had been more worried than I had let Lillian see over my discovery that Mr. Owen had escorted his niece, Carolyn, and Marion down from their school without Lillian's knowing anything about it beforehand . . and by my discovery that Marion apparently admired the man as much as did Carolyn.

I had warned Marion against him and she apparently had accepted the warning. But I know schoolgirl psychology—or ought to with my long experience in teaching—and I was not so sure that when her emotional remorse at having deceived her mother about the trip to town should have evaporated, she would discount my warning as due to prejudice and accept Carolyn's valuation of her beloved "uncle" instead.

That Owen in reality was no more Carolyn's uncle than he was Marion's made no difference in the hero worship which was patently Carolyn's for the man. Of course I realized that hers was a natural feeling and one not to be combated, because of the fact that her stepfather, Samuel Brixton, Owen's half brother, had been a real and wonderful father to her and to Ronald ever since her mother's marriage to him when she was a baby. To Carolyn her "dad" and her "uncle" were as real as to any girl possessing blood relatives bearing those titles, and even if I wished to do so, I could not destroy her faith in them.

There was nothing to do, however, but to accept the situation, and keep my eyes as far open as I could. But I could not forbear one fear-prompted question, although I couched it in terms which I was sure would not disturb Helena Brixton.

"I trust this change of plans means that we shall be able to see something of Mr. Owen during the Christmas holidays in the country," I said with an interrogative inflection.

Her answer was prompt and smothered my fears for the time being.

"Oh, no, he's going to join Sam tomorrow. I believe Sam expected him yesterday, but Charles had to stay over to attend to some important business of his own."

I was glad that the door opened just then, and the room was suddenly full of men, young and old, with Harry Underwood shepherding the masculine guests. It gave me something else to think about than the futile but troublesome and unanswerable query as to the "business" which could call family loving Samuel Brixton away from his home at Christmas time.

THE BEAUTY BOX

By HELEN FOLLETT

Be a rainy-daisy. When the air is misty or the rain is falling get out and walk. The complexion loves a wet, cold atmosphere; it loves it particularly ardently when the body is being exercised so that the skin warms and glows. A dry atmosphere is death on the human hide, which sows its temper and despair by flaking off in flour-like scales and throwing itself into a skin-storm of fine lines. When the heavens open and the flood descends put on your sassy raincoat and your seven-league boots and beat it. The result will be as edifying as a $5 facial treatment.

Tiny red lines in the skin are caused by ruptured capillaries. Not much can be done about them, but the free use of ice twice a day will strengthen the circulatory streams so that more blemishes of the kind will not appear. Electrical treatment is sometimes given to destroy them.

Fair-haired darlings should never wear harsh colors. Red, purple and orange are fatal to them. Pastel shades aren't so good, either, unless the blonde baby is still youthful. Beige is desirable, black is the best bet of all, some tones of brown are satisfactory. Nile green makes the hair look more golden. Navy blue is safe for all complexions and colorings.

No bleach will disturb the sallow complexion, which can be whitened only by a change of diet. If the skin is yallery-green or pasty-gray, eat citrus fruits. Take before breakfast the juice of two large oranges and the juice of half a lemon. Every day have a grapefruit for luncheon. At bedtime drink a glassful of tomato juice. The skin will take on a clearer, creamier tone.

If by chance the old cold cream pot is empty and the face needs an oiling, use the top substance on the cream that the milkman leaves. It will prove soothing and pleasant to the skin, doing away with roughness of the surface and giving that velvety "feel" that is desirable.

The girl who has to watch her calories and who steps upon the scales full of fears and trembles lest she has taken on an extra pound, should have her undergarments fitted to her. They should be loose enough to give freedom of movement, but there should be no superfluous material to add to body bulk.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Many Confusing Symptoms Make Chronic Bronchitis.

An ailment familiar to most persons is that common condition called chronic bronchitis.

Dr. Copeland

It is an affection which follows repeated attacks of acute bronchitis. It is frequently seen in chronic sufferers from asthma, heart distress, gout, or kidney disease. Elderly people are particularly subject to it.

The condition often confuses the lay public. They fear they are dealing with tuberculosis. This impression is formed because of the persistence of coughing.

It is misleading, it must be admitted, because the victim of chronic bronchitis will cough up blood. This symptom is not a sign of tuberculosis disease. It is due to the chronic irritation of the membranes, produced by the bronchitis.

In elderly individuals there is usually a definite shortness of breath. This is more noticeable on exertion and particularly in climbing steps or hills.

The cough is always present. It is variable and changes with the weather and season. The cough may disappear during the summer. Without fail it will appear again in the succeeding winter.

This condition is usually found in adults. However, chronic bronchitis may attack children. In the young, it is commonly associated with enlarged tonsils and adenoids.

Such children are mouth breathers. They are thin and undernourished. Because of the latter, too, it is often confused with tuberculosis.

As a rule, the general health in chronic brochitis may be excellent. But, even so, it is a handicap because of its constant annoyance and the increased liability to other diseases.

Many cases of chronic bronchitis are incurable. Others are entirely relieved by a change of climate. A southern latitude, particularly a dry as well as warm locality, is always desirable.

It is important to determine if some local or constitutional condition underlies it. This is particularly important in children with abnormal tonsils and adenoids.

Removal of associated causes often brings about a complete cure. In other cases, care and attention to the associated condition bring relief and comfort.

This is particularly true where chronic bronchitis is associated with heart disease, kidney or other organic defect. Treatment directed to the control of the more serious disturbance will improve the bronchitis.

A DIURETIC FOR THE KIDNEYS

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

An office wife with three children, who has worked with her husband all the nine years of their married life, wishes I'd say something that would convey to such a husband, the news that a woman with the worries of three very dear children, can't have her mind entirely on her work in his office. She wonders if they are too cold, or too warm, or fed correctly, or if they miss her and if the maid will watch them carefully so they won't get hurt. Her husband thinks only of business, and even when the children are ill he wants her to leave them. He says he hates her when she spends money.

"I'd like to stay at home and discharge the maid. It would be such fun to work at home," she says—and God bless her. With so few of them left, think of this one coaxing to be permitted to stay at home!

She even had to discharge the washwoman because she thought that was an extravagance, so with the worry over the children and the work in his office she is going to try to do the washing, too.

Well, I'll tell you what I think; and I'd like to tell him and I wish I could have the pleasure of looking at him when I tell him. He is spoiled and you have been too good to him. Why do you ask? Aren't you a partner? He thinks you have a good head, that's why he needs you in his office. Use it. Tell him you are going to stay home, and fire what help you don't need, and take care of your children and make a better home for him. He will like it when he gets it, but he has given orders so long it will be difficult for him to take this ultimatum. He is probably totally unaware of his shortcomings. How would he know? The neighbors can't tell him, even if they do tell you. If you take care of a house and three children and do the washing and he thinks that isn't enough, you let him try it for a while and you handle the office. He'd soon learn.

Good nature is a marvelous thing but you illustrate to what extremes it can be carried. If your children are ill and have a fever it is your duty to stay at home.

You sound so awfully sincere and anxious to please him, and you say you know times are hard and that you must retrench till things "pick up." You are sure not to make a mistake if you use your best judgment. Talk to him and tell him what you are going to do. Explain why. Most men want their wives to think of the children before they go to the office and run the business. He's a strange one.

Horoscopes

Sunday, March 15

Sunday's horoscope accents the affairs of mind, heart and culture. Venus being the ruling planet fostering all domestic, affectional, romantic and artistic pursuits. Mercury with Sol assists these to expression and advances intellectual and spiritual prospects.

Those whose birthday it is are under an excellent forecast for personal, intellectual and artistic advancement during the year. It should be a very happy year, bringing flourishing and pleasant experiences in the personal relations.

A child born on this day may have many intellectual, cultural and social accomplishments and graces. Its life should be pleasant and it should attain prosperity in those affiliations which pertain to the domestic or cultural sphere in life.

Monday, March 16

Monday's astrological forecast is for a fairly prosperous state of affairs in employment, labor, industry and property, etc., and in those businesses relating to writings, publishings and promotion. Speculative enterprises are not advised, nor is change or travel.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a fairly active and prosperous year in employment, in industry, pertaining to real property, and also in connection with writings, contracts and publicity. It would be inadvisable to make important change or undertake matters of a speculative nature.

A child born on this day should be versatile and clever, making its best success in the employment of others. It should be steady, dependable and diligent.

Household Hints

If the cream does not whip up to the amount you expected, beat the white of an egg until stiff, add powdered sugar and a little vanilla and whip this into the cream. I doubt if you will know the difference except in the added quantity.

One housewife waxes her window sills just as she does her floors. It protects them from all dust and rain and if dusted with the room each day they rarely require washing. They should be waxed once every three months.

To whiten and soften the hands that must be in the water many times during the day, place a bottle of vinegar near the sink and every time after having your hands in the water, rub them with a little vinegar. It will prevent them from chapping and will keep them white.

PERSHING DUMFOUNDED BY FOCH'S CHANGE IN PLANS

French Leader Places Curb on First U. S. Army

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

By GEN. JOHN J. PERSHING

Commander-in-Chief, American Expeditionary Forces.

Succeeding chapters of "My Experiences in the World War" will appear daily and Sunday exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

CHAPTER LXII.

An attack by the French Tenth Army, begun August 29, was undertaken to force the retirement of the enemy from the Vesle and Aisne Rivers. On its relief from the Vesle August 7 the 32d American Division (Haan) was assigned to the Tenth Army and entered the line August 28, immediately undertaking a series of local operations, in which gains were made in the face of very heavy fire. Ravines and numerous caves in the region provided ideal cover for the defending troops.

The general attack of the Army the following day met but slight success, the enemy resisting desperately along his entire front, but on the 30th by a flank attack from the south the 32d Division captured Juvigny, pushing a small salient into the German lines.

Gen. Pershing

Hard fighting continued August 31, but by the end of the day the 32d had reached the important Soissons-St. Quentin road, where it was relieved September 2. The 32d Division had advanced nearly three miles, and its success contributed greatly to the forced withdrawal of the German line to the Aisne River.

As pre-arranged between Gen. Petain and myself, the sector from Port-sur-Seille east of the Moselle River to Varnnville (north of les Eparges), 42 miles in extent, then occupied by the entire French Eighth Army and a part of the French Second Army, was transferred to my command August 30.

Foch Presents New Plan

The front included the St. Mihiel salient, which was between these points and embraced the permanent fortresses around Toul. We had three divisions in line on the south face of the sector, but the mass of our battle troops would not take over the trenches until the night before the attack.

As we have seen, there had been a great deal of discussion leading up to the understanding regarding the St. Mihiel offensive. August 16, preliminary instructions had been issued by me and these had been supplemented from time to time by verbal directions, and now everything was moving smoothly toward readiness for the attack.

In my conversation with Marshal Foch as late as August 25 he had suggested the extension of our front on the west of the salient. Two French corps in the sector had been assigned to my command and arrangements for the transfer to the area of auxiliary troops and services had been agreed upon with no hint that Foch was not in full accord with our plans.

August 30, the day I assumed command of the sector, Marshal Foch, accompanied by Gen. Weygand, his Chief of Staff, came to my residence at Ligny-en-Barrois, and after the usual cordial exchange of greetings presented an entirely new plan for the use of the American Army.

The Marshal began by saying that the German armies were in more or less disorder from recent attacks by the Allies, and that we must not allow them to reorganize, and that the British would continue their attack in the direction of Cambrai and St. Quentin and the French toward Mesnil.

Outlines Offensives

Then, much to my surprise, he proposed that the objectives in the St. Mihiel operation be restricted and the attack made on the southern face only, and that upon its completion two other operations be undertaken by combined American and French, a number of our divisions going under French command. His plans, defining the operations after St. Mihiel, were as follows:

(a) An attack between the Meuse and Argonne, executed by the 2nd French Army reinforced by a few American divisions (four or six), to be prepared at once and launched as soon as possible after that in Woevre.

(b) A French-American attack extending from the Argonne to the South road, to be prepared also without any delay so that it may be launched a few days after the preceding one. This attack will be executed by: On the right, an American army, acting on each side of the Aisne; on the left, the 4th French Army extending its action to the South road.

"I realize," Foch said, "that I am presenting a number of new ideas and that you will probably need time to think them over, but I should like your first impressions," which I did not hesitate a moment to give.

"Well, marshal," I replied, "this is a very sudden change. We are going forward as already recommended to you and approved by you, and I cannot understand why you want these changes. Moreover, I think that to make an attack in the salient with limited objectives would cost little less than to carry out the original idea, which I think would put us in much better position."

"That is true," he admitted, "but the fate of the 1918 campaign will be decided in the Aisne region, and I wish to limit the Woevre (St. Mihiel) attack so the Americans can participate in the Meuse offensive, which will produce still greater results."

Would Divide Army

"But Marshal Foch," I said, "here on the very day that you turn over a sector to the American Army, almost on the eve of an offensive, you ask me to reduce the operation so you can take away several of my divisions and assign some to the French 2nd Army and use others to form an American army to operate in conjunction with the French 4th Army, leaving me with little to do except hold what will become a quiet sector after the St. Mihiel offensive. This virtually destroys the American Army we have been trying so long to form."

Marshal Foch suggested that if I could give a satisfactory solution which would permit the execution of the operations in view he would be glad to carry it out, but he did not think it possible; that he had studied the question carefully and had sincerely looked for some way to avoid dividing the American Army, but that he did not believe it could be found.

"One way," I suggested, "might be to withdraw the Americans from other sectors and put them in with their right on the Meuse and let them extend as far to the west as possible."

"That might be considered," said Marshal Foch, "although it would be difficult to execute the St. Mihiel operation and have time to shift the command to another front for an operation there. But there would be no objection to relieving American divisions from the Woevre (St. Mihiel) by tired French divisions later, so they could be sent to one or both of the proposed American groups."

Pershing Disapproves

He then requested me to send reserve divisions toward the Aisne while the St. Mihiel attack was going on, and said that later, having made studies and general preparation for the attack, I could go and take command when the army was formed.

Referring again to the St. Mihiel operation, I argued that there would be less risk if we should attack on both sides of the salient. Marshal Foch seemed to think there was danger of our becoming too deeply involved in that sector, although in conference in July he had stated that clearing the salient would bring us within reach of the Briey Basin and permit action on a larger scale between the Meuse and the Moselle.

However, he now clung to the idea that the objective should be the line Regnieville-Thiaucourt-Vigneulles, and that the attack should be made only on the southern face. But I did not think it wise, at this eleventh hour, to make changes in our solution of the problem. I was willing to accept the limited objectives, but I held out in favor of the secondary attack from the west.

Supporting his plans further, Marshal Foch suggested that for the operation in the Aisne he could put both Gen. Degoutte, who was thoroughly familiar with that region, and Gen. Malcor, who was also acquainted with the country and was chief of artillery of the Fourth Army at my disposal to assist with the aid of an American staff, in preparing the Aisne operation while I was engaged in the Woevre.

Gen. Degoutte

This was only a round-about way of attempting to assign Gen. Degoutte to command our troops.

Many officers who had served under him on the Vesle felt that he had unnecessarily sacrificed American troops, so for both reasons I disapproved of the suggestion.

Asks for Sector

The marshal then restated his proposal and suggested that if the two American contingents, one being the group assigned to the French Second Army and the other the proposed American Army on opposite sides of the Argonne, would eventually join hands, he could see only advantage in this.

The further we proceeded the more apparent it became to me that the result of any of these proposals would be to frustrate or at least seriously delay forming a distinctive American Army.

In this event it was certain that despite the contribution of our splendid units, whatever success might be attained would be counted as the achievement of the French armies and our participation would be entirely secondary.

I asked why these Americans which Marshal Foch proposed should go to the Aisne, where they would replace French divisions, should not go to replace French divisions in the French Second Army, then between the Meuse River and the Argonne Forest.

In other words, why should not the Americans take over the whole sector then occupied by the French 2nd Army west of the Meuse, thus making the French troops relieved available to reinforce the French 4th Army.

I repeated what I had often said, that the American government and people expected the army to act as a unit and not be dispersed in this way. I pointed out that each time we were about to complete the organization of our army, some proposition like this was presented to prevent it.

"Do you wish to go to battle?" Marshal Foch broke in.

"Most assuredly," I replied, "but as an American Army and in no other way."

He argued that there would not be time, whereupon I said: "If you will assign me a sector I will take it at once."

"Where would it be?" he asked.

"Wherever you say."

Challenges Authority

I reminded him that the French had insisted on our shipping to France only infantry and machine gun units, and had made the distinct promise that they would supply us with artillery and other auxiliary troops when needed.

I pointed out that he himself had made repeated and urgent requests for these limited shipments, and had promised that we would be furnished whatever necessary to complete our organization until our own auxiliary troops should arrive. I then demanded that he fulfill these promises.

Marshal Foch adhered to his proposition, saying, however, that he was disposed to consider any suggestion that would keep the American Army together. My reply was that I was quite ready to send divisions west of the Argonne Forest as an American Army, but not to serve in the French Second Army.

Foch then asserted that this would not leave the French armies enough troops with which to attack, ignoring my argument that the question was as broad as it was long, and that he could transfer French as easily as he could American divisions.

After making two tentative suggestions, first, that we should operate east of the Meuse River, and second, west of the Argonne Forest, both of which he rejected, I proposed flatly that the front of the American Army be extended to include the sector between the Meuse and the Argonne. Foch admitted that this had been his original idea, but he still pleaded lack of time.

The discussion was somewhat heated and much of it was carried on so rapidly that it could not be translated. He continued to reiterate his demands for the adoption of his plan, but I had learned that it was necessary to be very firm in dealing with him, and I finally said, in effect:

"Marshal Foch, you have no authority as Allied Commander-in-Chief to call upon me to yield up my command of the American Army to have it scattered among the Allied forces, where it will not be an American Army at all."

Firm in Refusal

He was apparently surprised at my resentment of his attempt to confine American effort to subordinate roles, and said: "I must insist upon the arrangement," to which I replied, as we both rose:

"You may insist all you please, but I decline absolutely to agree to your plan. While our army will fight wherever you may decide, it will not fight except as an independent American Army."

I pointed out to him that I had depended upon him to assist in carrying out the organization of our army, that my government, from the President down, insisted upon it, and that we had all been criticized for parceling out our troops here and there. I drew Marshal Foch's attention to the message President Wilson had sent to the embassies in Washington, stating that the American Army should fight as such and on the Western Front.

He said he was disposed to do what he could toward forming an American army. He then picked up his maps and papers and left, very pale and apparently exhausted, saying at the door as he handed me the memorandum of his proposals that he thought that after careful study I should arrive at the same conclusion he had.

The impression this meeting left on my mind was that Marshal Foch was inclined to aid in the formation of an American army, but that upon reaching a certain point he had allowed himself to be persuaded to take the view that after the reduction of the St. Mihiel salient it should be split up as proposed.

Contrary to His Belief

With the added support of American divisions making the 2d Army largely American, he no doubt thought that the French would then be able to push forward and cut Germany's vital lines of communication.

I was willing to use our forces wherever seemed best, but not under French commanders. The plan suggested for the American participation in these operations in conjunction with the French with a considerable number of our divisions under their command was not in any sense acceptable to me.

The proposal to divide our recently formed 1st Army into several groups, mainly to assist French armies, could not be entertained. It was directly contrary to my belief that an American army under its own flag could best serve the Allied cause.

An enormous amount of preparation had already been made in our area in the construction of roads, railroads, regulating stations, hospitals and other installations looking to the use and supply of our armies on a particular front.

Moreover, the inherent disinclination of our troops to serve under Allied commanders had already grown to open disapproval, and if continued under the changes proposed would have been entirely destructive to American morale.

MAILED DOPE, GETS 6 MONTHS

Mrs. Wilda Daugherty, 25, was sentenced to serve six months in jail by Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker, when she pleaded guilty of smuggling morphine into the county jail last September.

The drug, in a special delivery letter addressed to her husband, Joseph Daugherty, was intercepted by Warden John McNeil. Daugherty, a government prisoner awaiting trial on a narcotic charge, later was sentenced to two years in Atlanta Penitentiary.

Mrs. Daugherty, indicted and arrested, jumped her bond and evaded arrest until Thursday.

PLAYGROUNDS TO OPEN EARLY

For the first time, many of the city's playgrounds will be opened two months earlier than usual, it was announced today, to provide after-school recreation for children. The grounds will open May 4 instead of July 1 as in the past.

An additional appropriation has been provided by Council. The Bureau of Recreation plans the added schedule for May, June, September and October. Long daylight hours prompted the change.

The grounds to be operated six months instead of the usual two are: Ammon, Bedford avenue and Marohn street; Armstrong, South Thirteenth street and Sarah street; Burgwin, Mansion and Johnston streets; Garfield, Hillcrest and Mathilda streets; Hickman, Blair and Courtland streets; Homewood, Hamilton and Lang avenues; Kennard, Kirkpatrick and Moultrie streets; Larimer, Larimer avenue, between Winslow and Shetland streets; Magee, Greenfield avenue and Beechwood boulevard; Pleasant Valley, Wilson avenue; Ream, Woodruff and Merrimac streets; Shaler, Shaler street at Greenleaf, and Sullivan, Liberty avenue at Thirty-sixth street.

STORE OWNER ROUTS ROBBER

A Negro who escaped from Kay's Dress Shop, at 214 Oliver avenue, after a struggle with A. L. Klopfer, Jr., the proprietor, who surprised him looting the place last night, was being sought by police and detectives today.

Klopfer, who lives at 9111 Frankstown road, went to his shop shortly after 10 p. m., and found the Negro piling dresses in front of the store. Seizing a hat rack, the owner beat the robber on the head, but the man broke from his grasp after a battle and fled into Oliver avenue.

In the street the Negro, his head bleeding, ran into the path of an automobile driven by Attorney Benjamin Giffen. The attorney swerved and brought his car to a stop. The Negro, with Klopfer in pursuit, continued to run down Oliver avenue and disappeared in a narrow alley. City Detectives Robert Best and Murray Edlis searched the neighborhood a few minutes later, but found no trace of the robber.

Investigation disclosed that the Negro had jimmied a rear window of the dress shop.

Woman Juror's Fall in Mud Halts Trials

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 14.—Three damage suits being heard in court were continued because Mrs. George O'Leary, of Roscoe, a juror, rebuked counsel for the plaintiffs because of a fall in mud.

The jurors were taken to inspect damage alleged done to farms by fumes from the Donora Zinc Company plant. While going over the ground, Mrs. O'Leary fell in the mud, soiling her clothes. Dwight M. Anderson, counsel for three plaintiffs, declares the angered juror said to him:

"You may be a good lawyer, but you don't know humanity."

Declaring he feared his clients' interests would suffer, Anderson asked and received a continuance.

MACY 'AD' MAN TO RESIGN

NEW YORK, March 14.—(AP.)—Kenneth Collins, executive vice president of R. H. Macy & Co., is to resign and join Lennen & Mitchell, an advertising agency, on April 12, it was disclosed.

It was Collins, a native of St. Paul, Minn., who as head of Macy's public relations and advertising, first employed humor and human interest in that concern's advertising.

Collins is 32 years old. Advertising leaders consider him one of the country's foremost exponents of printed salesmanship.

He served the United States in the air force and was for a time professor of English in the University of Idaho. Later he lectured on the same subject in Boston University. Then he attended Harvard, gaining a master's degree. He is a University of Washington graduate.

Held as Assailant Of Woman and Baby

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., March 14.—(AP.)—Jack C. Clendennon was held incommunicado, charged with felonious assault with intent to kill Mrs. Luther E. Floyd, her daughter, Dolores, 2, and her sister, Mrs. Dolores Prince.

The women and baby, all beaten into unconsciousness, were found in the Floyd apartment last Sunday. Deputies arrested Clendennon, a neighbor, after Mrs. Floyd regained consciousness and, according to officers, identified him as her assailant.

PAINTERS BALK PAY REDUCTION

Pittsburgh journeymen of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, have refused a proposed cut of from $12 to $10 a day in wages, P. A. Freyvogel, a member of the executive committee, of the employing painters, announced. Members of the union held that a cut in wages would not stimulate business.

The annual meeting of the Master Painters and Decorators' Association of Pittsburgh will be held in the Fort Pitt Hotel next Friday. Speakers will be Freyvogel, Carl Dabelstein, of New York, president of the International Master Painters and Decorators' Association, and Donald J. Howard, manager of the community affairs division of the Chamber of Commerce.

MAN SUICIDE, WOMAN FREED

Homicide detectives investigating the death of Nicholas Mamula, 26, of 2303 Carson street, today expressed belief he had ended his life because of despondency over unemployment.

Mamula shot himself through the heart in the third-floor apartment of Edith Abell, 2028 Fifth avenue, yesterday afternoon, according to detectives. The woman was detained for questioning, but released two hours later.

A powder burn on Mamula's thumb and another on his vest indicated, Detective William T. McCready said, that he had shot himself. The weapon was taken from the woman's bureau.

Democrat Heads Board in Cambria

EBENSBURG, Pa., March 14.—William J. Cavanaugh, Democrat, was elected president of the Cambria County Board of Commissioners, succeeding the late John D. Walker. Cavanaugh the first Democrat ever elected president of the board, has served as a commissioner since 1923.

Laundry Employe Robbed of $1,445

BALTIMORE, March 14.—(AP.)—Three bandits using an automobile with stolen license plates held up Vincent Rudolph, 28, assistant cashier of a laundry, as he started for a bank, and fled with a paper package he was carrying, containing $1,445.

6 HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

Edward W. Hefferman, 50, of 1152 Jefferson avenue, Washington, Pa., suffered lacerations of the head and face when an automobile in which he was riding was struck, police say, by a machine driven by Walter Harris, 47, a Negro, of 3433 Webster avenue, in the 1900 block, Sawmill Run boulevard, last night.

J. R. Moore, 33, and Albert Hanann, 38, both of 143 Cape May avenue, were injured when their automobile skidded and crashed into a pole in the 1300 block of West Liberty avenue late last night.

Two men were in a critical condition in hospitals today and a third was sought by police for questioning in connection with an automobile collision at Evergreen avenue and Babcock boulevard, Millvale. The injured were James Horner, 22, of Babcock boulevard, in St. Francis Hospital, and Alfred Grego, 24, of 119 Grant avenue, Millvale, in Allegheny General Hospital.

Felix Wisnewski, 49, of 154 Flintwood avenue, Overbrook, was in South Side Hospital today as a result of being thrown from the buggy he was driving in Sawmill Run boulevard late yesterday. Wisnewski's horse took fright and ran away after, police said, the automobile driven by the Rev. James Muir, of 3906 Lanmore avenue, Brentwood, grazed the buggy. The horse ran several blocks and leaped through a plate glass window in the grocery of Morris Fiver, at 1224 Edgebrook avenue. Humane agents rescued it.

HUSBAND LISTS WEDDING COSTS

When Mrs. Bessie Vukelich, 21, of Ross street, Wall, demanded, in her non-support suit, an accounting from her husband, Peter Vukelich, 26, of 2708 Sarah street, of the $2,040 presented them at their engagement party and wedding he filed a long document which listed even the $2.50 he spent for his marriage license. The couple, married last June, parted January 3.

Of $840 received at the engagement party, he accounts for $200 as "given by my mothe and father with the understanding that I return it the next day." Another $50 he says he borrowed to give his bride-to-be and returned it the next day.

He listed $55 for his wedding apparel and $70 for his wife's wedding dress. He said he spent $64 for the ring, $15 for the cake, $40 for flowers, $240 for cabs and $65 for six cooks for four days. Among other things they had $70 of lamb and $40 of chicken. Vukelich ends the accounting by claiming a personal loss of $52.50.

6 BANKRUPTCY CASES FILED

Five voluntary bankruptcy petitions were filed in Federal Court, A petition by Ray C. Wilson, a dentist, of Bradford, Pa., listed liabilities at $17,480.72 and assets at $4,795.35.

J. C. Soyster, 1115 Twelfth street, Altoona, a merchant, listed liabilities at $43,812.17 and assets at $24,664.46; John E. Hetrick, Huston Township, Blair County, liabilities $1,740 and assets at $1,050, and Mabel B. Hetrick, Martinsburg, Blair County, liabilities $1,490 and essets $2,750.

Dan S. Strasburger, trading as Atlantic Glass Company, Pittsburgh, filed a petition, and will file his schedule later. An involuntary bankruptcy petition was filed against the Homewood Lumber Company, Pittsburgh, by three petitioners who listed claims aggregating $712.29.

Westinghouse Wins Trade Name Fight

WASHINGTON, March 14.—(AP.)—The patent appeal board granted the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company permission to use the trademark "Adjust-O-Matic" to describe electric sadirons.

The Williams Oil-O-Matic Heating Company, Bloomington, Ill., opposed the application. The appeal board ruled the Williams company could not control the use of "o-matic" in trade names.

Officer Pushed From Auto Hurt, Man Held

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., March 14.—Carl Hardin, 32, Mount Pleasant, alleged to have pushed a coal and iron policeman from his automobile after 10 gallons of liquor was found in the machine at Maxwell, was ordered held for grand jury action here. The officer, employed by the H. C. Frick Coke Company, suffered a fractured arm in the fall.

Ex-Teller Pleads Guilty, Gets 2 Years

Myron D. Trace, 34, former teller in the First National Bank of Meadville, was sentenced to two years in the Atlanta Penitentiary when he pleaded guilty to embezzlement of $1,900 of the bank's funds.

Obituary

McBride Funeral.

Funeral services for Rollo H. McBride, organizer and superintendent of the Parting of the Ways Home, 216 Stockton avenue, who died Thursday night, will be held at his late home, 1218 Superior avenue, North Side, tomorrow afternoon. Burial will be in Uniondale Cemetery at 10 a. m. Monday. The body was to be taken to the Parting of the Ways Home this afternoon, to lie in state from 1 to 5 p. m.

Drop of Newest Poison Would Kill Army

CAPETOWN, South Africa, March 14.—(INS.)—The world's deadliest known poison, so potent that a single drop is sufficient to kill 10,000 adults, and a whiff will prove fatal, has been discovered in a Transvaal bulb, it was revealed today by The Burger, government organ.

Because of its exceptionally fatal powers, the government decided to keep manufacture of the poison a secret. The scientific name of the bulb of deadliest qualities is "Adenia."

The bulb poison was discovered by Dr. Green, of the Derstepport Laboratory. It is the only known poison that does not leave a trace on the victim's body.

STUDENTS ACT ON RUM TRUCE

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 14.—(AP.)—A compromise was in force today whereby 17 students suspended for liquor drinking at the University of Minnesota farm school will be tentatively reinstated.

The step was taken yesterday by a special committee of the State Senate, meeting with university officials.

It was decided that first offenders would be granted their diplomas, and that all others, except two, would have an opportunity to make up certain work at school. Two of the students have been expelled for bootlegging, and will not be permitted to return.

A resolution calling for an investigation by the Senate was introduced in that body yesterday, but action was postponed until Monday to allow a committee to confer with school officials.

Students at the farm school held a mass-meeting and were reported to have been overwhelmingly in favor of supporting the school administration's stand.

STILL SEIZED, TWO HELD

Failure to draw the window shades during their alleged operation of a still caused the arrest of three men at 1310 Allegheny avenue, North Side, early today.

Alexander Deniello, 23, 1813 Cliff street, and Harry Abbott, 35, 1310 Allegheny avenue, charged with violating the Snyder act, were held for court by Magistrate Ray Schneider in North Side Police Court. Frank Casino, 22, 636½ Boggs avenue, the third man arrested, was discharged.

Police reported confiscating a 100-gallon still, 18 five-gallon cans of moonshine whisky, 26 empty barrels and 34 barrels of mash which was destroyed. Information leading to the raid was furnished police by a neighbor.

A 150-gallon still and a quantity of moonshine were seized by police in a raid upon a house at 9 Mitchell street, Woods Run. Police are searching for the operator.

MYSTERY DEATH HELD MURDER

ANCONA, Ill., March 14.—(AP.)—In a house with every door and window locked, and a mantle of unmarked snow outside, Charles Ramme, 55, wealthy farmer, was found dead in bed with a fractured spinal column and crushed chest.

County authorities postponed an inquest in order to investigate the case, which they view as a murder. They held he could not have inflicted the injuries on himself.

But in pursuing a theory of murder, they said they found all windows unopened and most of them covered with dust, while the snow bore the tracks only of those who discovered the body in the lonely farmhouse.

Authorities learned that Ramme had been wed secretly to a woman known as Anna Arnolds. She and Ramme's brother, Otto, found the body.

SKELETON, NOTE BARE MINE FEUD

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., March 14.—(AP.)—Officers said today discovery of a skeleton and an exploded shotgun shell bearing a confession had solved the mystery of the disappearance of Don Allen, a prospector, 10 years ago.

Thomas Stocker found Allen's grave and the shell—faded from years of exposure—in Big Bear Valley yesterday. In another shotgun shell was a cryptic warning to Allen to keep away from a mining claim.

Stocker said Allen's grave was marked by a slab of wood, upon which was written with pencil:

"Don Allen (?) (1849-1921)."

Policeman Shoots Man During Holdup

TACOMA, Wash., March 14.—(AP.)—A robber who attempted to hold up a downtown service station while a policeman was in the office, was near death from bullet wounds today after a revolver fight in which nine shots were fired at close range. The officer escaped unscathed. The robber said his name was John Moran, 23, of St. Paul.

Woman's Assailant Sought by Police

GREENSBURG, Pa., March 14.—Emma Burns, 23, Negro, of Slickville, is in the hospital here in a serious condition with bullet wounds alleged to have been inflicted by Charles Wright, 25, Negro, of Pittsburgh. Police are searching for the operator.

DAMAGE SUITS ASK $40,000

Mrs. Lucy Baner, of New Kensington, asked $25,000 damages for the death of her husband, John Baner, 58, by an automobile, in a suit against Norman P. May filed in Common Pleas Court. A car driven by May struck Baner as he was crossing the Freeport road in Harmar Township March 14, 1930, inflicting fatal injuries, the suit averred. Baner left two children, aged 16 and 18.

Seeking to recover $15,000 damages for the death of their son, Mr. and Mrs. John B. McCormick, of Forbes street, Squirrel Hill, filed suit against Ralph Gruber in Common Pleas Court. The son, John B. McCormick, Jr., aged 6, was struck by a truck owned and driven by Gruber on Forbes street near the McCormick home September 10, the suit alleged.

Joseph Moore, of Carnegie, was awarded $10,000 damages for injuries in a railroad crossing accident by a jury in Common Pleas Court in his suit against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. Moore suffered concussion of the brain and other injuries when his automobile was struck by a train on the Washington pike crossing of the Washington branch of the road at Leetsdale December 20, 1928, according to the testimony.

McKeesport Man Attempts Suicide

Out of work for some time, Michael Banko, 56, of 100 Thirteenth street, McKeesport, this morning slashed his throat with a razor, according to McKeesport police. The man, whose condition is serious, was taken to McKeesport Hospital.

Fear Leaves Lorry After Flight in Airplane

CHAPTER XXVI.

Jenny and some of her friends had taken several flights in the commercial seaplanes on Lake Worth. Mary Lou had wanted to go, too, but, when she mentioned it, Lorrimer's distress was so evident that she relinquished the opportunity.

"Please," he begged, "I don't ask much of you, Delight, but I can't endure to have you go—"

"You come with me," she urged, on an impulse.

He went quite white.

"I can't," he told her, low. "Think me a coward if you wish, but I can't. It's. . .it's beyond me."

So she did not go or plan to go until the telegram came from Dr. Mathews.

"Margaret has had an accident," it read, "and is ill, having fallen and broken her arm. She suffers considerably from shock. Tell Travers. Advise you to return at once."

Travers Flies With Her

Mary Lou folded the telegram neatly, with fingers which shook. She couldn't bear to have anything happen to Margaret Lorrimer. She was sane enough to realize that a broken arm, in itself, was not serious, but she knew the weakened state of Margaret's heart. She went at once to find Lorrimer, who had gone, in advance of the Wynnes' luncheon that noon, to Bradley's, with several other men, to watch the gaming tables and, perhaps, to play a little.

They had recently come in from swimming. Mary Lou's hair was still damp and curled tightly about her pale little face. She met Mrs. Wynne and Jenny on the way out the door, told them briefly and ran, hatless, the very short distance to the club.

She sent a servant in for Lorrimer, and when he came out she found that, despite her wish not to worry him and to be calm, she was shaking all over.

"What is it, dear?" he asked, instantly.

She pulled herself together.

"Your mother has broken her arm," she said, "and Dr. Mathews wants us to come home at once."

He took the wire from her clenched fingers and read it. His eyes clouded with instant anxiety, but he said, quite steadily:

"Don't worry so. She'll be all right. We'll get the train out tonight."

"No. I'm going by airplane. The train does not leave till so late. I can save time, by air," said Mary Lou. "You can follow by train. I won't have her there, ill and in pain and alone!" she ended, defiantly.

"Mathews—" began Lorrimer. But her mind was made up.

"Dr. Mathews is all very well," she cried, "but you ought to be there, and as soon as is humanly possible. And I ought to be there. She's been kinder than Heaven to me," said Mary Lou passionately. "And what has she been to you!—must you always think of yourself?" she demanded. "I'm going to the airways company and engage a plane. You can come when you please."

In the end, he went with her. He had never hated himself so much as during the short time of preparation and arrangement, when he stood trembling, like a frightened animal. He went to the place and was sick with terror at the sound of the engine tuning up. But he set his teeth and went.

"Contact!"

They were off. For all her sense of desperate haste and her keen anxiety and grief for Margaret, Mary Lou's heart leaped with exultation. This was living! This effortless movement through clear air, these wings of a bird which carried her, the strong heart of the engine beating. . . beating. . . She forgot Lorrimer, she forgot almost everything in the first triumphant minute.

Terror Leaves Him

They had been flying two hours when Lorrimer turned to her. He was very pale, but his eyes were normal, and he managed to smile.

Two hours, of almost abject terror, of a sense of sinking, a faintness, a will to cry out that he couldn't go on, he couldn't—but terror which diminished, and faintness which passed, and a will which strengthened itself at long last.

He touched her hand, almost timidly, and she turned.

"I've been a fool," was all he said.

When they reached New York, having saved many hours, he was cured, cured for all time of that old terror that backwash of his crash, of his bitter experiences.

Having wired Westwood House, they were met by a car at the landing field and hurried out to the house. In the car Lorrimer, for the first time in her experience of him, talked his heart out, told all the fears which had gnawed at him, the memories which had sickened him—all gone now. He was healed.

"We'll have a plane!" he promised.

"You'll let me learn to fly?" she asked, deep in her role, forgetting that she had no right to ask, he no right to give permission. But the little question moved him profoundly, filled him with a blazing hope.

"When I get back into it," he said happily, "I'll teach you—myself!"

They had arrived home. They found Margaret much better, a pleasant nurse in attendance, and Dr. Mathews haunting the house like a faithful and efficient watch dog. He had had a great bone man out to see Mrs. Lorrimer. X-ray plates had been taken, the arm was set and would heal nicely. What she needed now was rest, for the weakened heart which had suffered from the strain of the shock.

Refuses Credit

"Such an idiot!" she said explaining, "to slip on—of all things—the dining room floor! But I hadn't felt well, I was a little faint and the first thing I knew poor Peter was trying to lift me up. Well, no great harm has been done."

And much good, she added to herself, thinking of all that her son had overcome to come to her—on wings.

Often as time went on Lorrimer found opportunity to say to Mary Lou, "I can't thank you enough for what you did for me—making me take that trip."

She answered, always, as she had answered him when he spoke of his first visit to the Veterans' Hospital, "I didn't make you. You make yourself. To be frank," she told him honestly, "I didn't care whether you came or not. Or, no, I did care! I wanted you to come for your mother's sake. But whether you had come with me or stayed and taken the train didn't matter, as far as my going was concerned. I had to get to her—and as soon as I could, you see."

And he answered, rather humbly:

"Yes, I see, Delight."

She was more out of love than ever with the name, the quaint little name, which seemed to her so "precious" and affected and idiotic. Yet she answered to it, postured for it, reminded herself constantly that Mary Lou no longer existed. Even her Aunt and Uncle had written her, from the far off and incredible isolation of their oriental jungle, under that name, written bold and black in Clara's hand. But in the letter her own name occurred:

"I am going by airplane," Mary Lou insisted.

"Mary Lou, are you crazy? If I weren't so tied up here, I'd come home at once and take you away from that place. It all sounds completely mad to me."

Mary Lou had written Clara often, since her first letter, and explained and re-explained, in order to justify Clara's shrewd and astonished eyes her "job." Lately the weekly letters she had sent, always written with complete news of Billy, obtained over the telephone, or by a flying trip out to see that young man, lately, those letters had ceased to justify anything, and had become rather reticent, so that Clara, wise woman, had announced to her weary husband that it looked very much as if Mary Lou's heart were beginning to be involved in that same "job." To which her tired and steaming engineer generally grunted a preoccupied husbandly assent. Not that he didn't care a lot for Mary Lou, but he was pretty busy building a railroad at the ends of the earth, was Howard.

People thought Mary Lou, sometimes disconsolately, had about forgotten that Mary Lou Thurston had ever existed! Wasn't it funny—not funny, Ha-ha—but, peculiar!—and a little terrifying that a name and its attached personality could so quickly be swallowed up in a game of make-believe? Larry Mitchell never called her Mary Lou, now, even when they were alone together; nor did Mrs. Lorrimer; nor Dr. Mathews. They had all learned their parts so well, almost too well, she thought, suffering a comic little wound to her ego. And Jenny, well, Jenny didn't know, of course. She was often sorry that Jenny didn't know. Jenny didn't ask questions, didn't pry into the "past" of Delight Harford, never made embarrassing inquiries, but accepted her as she was, in the present. Still she and Jenny had become so attached to each other that Mary Lou felt her wholesale deception, which, naturally, included Jenny, was a slight impalpable, but nevertheless real barrier between them. Even if Jenny didn't peer and pry, bless her, Mary Lou had always to be on her guard.

And lately Lorrimer had commenced talking again, talking of old times and "mutual" memories. And Mary Lou was forced to sit and listen and sometimes agree and sometimes say "Yes, I remember" or "Tell me again, I've forgotten. No, I don't recall Dolly Jameson, who was she? Oh, a man? No, Lorry, I don't think I remember, it was so long ago." And listening and answering, she became slowly aware of one of the unendurable things she had to cope with, which was her very real, very alive jealousy of the actual Delight. Whether she lived or not, whether or not she ever came back to complete Lorrimer's healing and mold his happiness, Mary Lou hated her, and feared her, and was sickeningly jealous of her.

"But he loves me!" she would tell herself foolishly, and with a futile effort to gain some comfort out of all this uncomfortable tangle. "But he loves me," she would repeat. And then would be forced to face the fact that, while he loved her, it was because he thought her—Delight.

DAILY TRUE STORY— Efficiency

Melton G. Warner was one of those rare specimens of humanity, an efficiency expert who was thoroughly efficient.

To be thoroughly efficient is to be, supposedly, cold-blooded. To be reputed cold-blooded, it goes without saying, is to be largely unpopular.

Warner was quite popular with the head of the great Stella Products Company. His brand of efficiency had speeded up production, cut costs and increased sales. G. W. Robinson, active president of the big concern, approved of Warner.

The mass of employes did not hold Warner in such esteem. He didn't spy on them, he openly studied methods and asked intelligent questions. Only rarely did he suggest the discharge of any employe. But he did keep them on the job. To be sure he permitted a five-minute leeway in getting in for work and he increased the luncheon period from forty-five minutes to a full hour.

But, as Shelia Holmes said, "When we are on the job, man, we have to hustle. No monkey business."

Warner Amused

Shelia was pretty. Her red hair didn't seem to be red—one merely though of some pretty flower when he looked at her. Melton G. Warner often looked at Shelia.

"Warner seems to be looking at you quite a lot, Sheila," Molly Adams said. Molly worked with Shelia in the catalog department.

"He looks at all of us, and tries to figure out how much more work he can get out of us," Shelia answered.

"He sort of looks differently at you," Molly insisted.

"I'll bet you," Shelia said to Molly, "that if I started in to think as hard as I could for a million years, I couldn't think of anyone I hate as much as an efficiency expert!"

Molly giggled.

Melton G. Warner, who had paused just outside to glance at the labels on some filing cases, walked showly to his office. His ears weren't burning, nor was he angry. Rather, he was amused.

Red-headed women, he told himself, may be somewhat peppery at times, but they are hustlers and loyal in their work.

It finally came time for Warner to go on his vacation. He was efficient in that as in everything else. For years he had been taking a month up-state with the Wethergills on their neat and thriving farm. In fact, he had been going there since he was a boy and later years his help in financing the place and his efficiency ideas had made the elderly couple quite independent. Naturally, they were inclined to worship Melton G. Warner.

And so Melton G. Warner drove leisurely for two days and arrived at Ridgevale, thence to the Wethergill farm and a sincerely hearty welcome.

The next morning he went down to the river for fishing. He had fair success, despite the fact that summer people from the Ridgevale House fished the river in an amateurish way, although they were not allowed on this stretch of the river that ran through the Wethergill property.

There was an especially big and saucy trout in the deep hole under a fallen tree. Warner failed to land it.

He failed morning after morning and his pride was hurt. There must be some fly, some lure, that would make the old trout strike.

Then he took to going down to this hole at sunset, but with no better results. Finally he tied a fly of his own invention and went down there to try his skill. He approached the hole with all the skill of an Indian scout, making not the least sound. Parting the small birches he took his stand and let the dry fly float down and around the eddy.

There was a splash. No trout could have made that. It was caused by something unseen back of the fallen tree. Warner started to cast again when something stirred the water and up popped a head—a feminine head, crowned with red hair. The head and shoulders popped so far up that Warner was doubtful if the owner were garbed other than au natural. The girl's shocked scream as she opened her eyes and saw him proved that he was correct in his guess as to her lack of apparel.

Trout Frightened

Down went the red head, there was a flash of light color under water and then her head appeared back of the fallen tree trunk.

"For goodness sake—if it isn't Mr. Warner!" she said, with a note of anger.

"The surprise is mutual—you are Miss Holmes, are you not?"

"If I am not then I've been deceiving everyone including myself about my name—and now please go away."

"Certainly. You have frightened away the handsome big salmo fontinalis that lives in this pool—"

"Will it bite? Is it a snake?" Shelia's eyes opened wider than ever with fright.

"It is a trout."

"Well, why not call it a trout—is it efficient to use a lot of long words when one short word will serve?"

Shelia was recovering her courage. He had said he would go. She smiled at him and Melton G. Warner actually laughed.

"My clothes are there on that box beside you. Please go away—I know you will—away off out of sight. I—"

Shelia stared hard and then looked at him angrily.

"What did you do with my clothes and the box they were on?" she demanded.

"I have seen neither box nor clothes, Miss Holmes."

"But they were right there. I dived off the box and was swimming up to that sand bar and then I floated down and dived under the tree and fooled around and you came and butted—you came, and if you have hidden my clothes for a joke—"

"When you dived the chances are that the splash of the water floated box, clothes and all down river. No telling where they are."

Shelia screamed at this, a sort of hopeless scream.

"How dumb I am! I saw a box floating down stream, away down, when I was up at the sand bar. What shall I do?"

"I can get you a white horse and let you play lady Godiva, or I will step aside, loan you part of my clothes and then tell you what to do next."

Marries Shelia

"I'm headed for the house in rubber boots and an undergarment. You put on my clothes and sit down. I'll be back and get you. Otherwise you will get lost."

"Yes, Mr. Warner."

Shelia was sitting there in Warner's clothes when he returned. He took her down stream a short distance to where a home-made boat was hidden. They got in and went down stream in the fast deepening twilight. Here and there against rocks and snags and on shore they rescued Shelia's clothes, with the exception of her shoes, which, having thick rubber soles, had sunk.

It was dark when he got her back to Wethergill's. They had dinner there while her clothes were drying and Shelia was wearing some of Mrs. Wethergill's.

"I've known Melton for fifteen years," Mr. Wethergill said to Shelia, "and he's a good fisherman, but seems to me this is about the purtiest fish he ever did catch;"

"John!" his wife exclaimed.

"He's very efficient," Shelia told them.

He took her back to her hotel. He tried to teach her to fish after this, but they seemed to lose interest in fishing after a few days when Warner suddenly embraced her and kissed her.

When any of Shelia's friends speak of her good looking husband these days, she agrees and always adds, "And he's so efficient!"

Little Journeys to Shrines of Classic Art

Today we reproduce another old masterpiece—the classic painting called "Burning the Old Love Letters." This is one of the few fine examples of the early Nebraska school, and was recently sold to a collector representing the Puller Brush Company. The picture will hang in the permanent collection of School for the Blind in Washington, D. C. The artist is still at large.

Municipal Oppression

Taxpayers' Burden Is Intolerable in View of Squandering of Their Money—Comment on Local News.

The squandering of the taxpayers' money by Mayor Kline's administration, as disclosed by the Department of Supplies scandal, becomes even more flagrant in the light of figures showing how municipal expenditures have risen while the general cost of living was going down. Pittsburgh's annual budget has increased under Kline from $21,612,641 to $28,747,626 and the tax rate has gone up almost proportionately.

If Mayor Kline were able to point to great public works or other notable achievements as the fruit of the heavier demand that has been imposed on the taxpayers they might be able to reconcile themselves to the burden; but he cannot. If the local tax burden were little higher than that borne by the people of other cities there would be less disposition to complain; but out of 250 cities in the United States with population in excess of 30,000 only six have a higher per capita tax than Pittsburgh, and in the six are resort cities like Atlantic City and St. Petersburg, Fla.

The rise in the budget, the increase in taxes, have been due in considerable part to favoritism in the purchase of supplies, to the practice of buying materials of every sort without advertising for bids, and of awarding contracts to high bidders. Notwithstanding the citizens' rebellion against all this extravagance, the administration shows no disposition to practice economy, but actually has the audacity to propose to the Legislature that authority be given Council to increase the salaries of members of the Mayor's cabinet.

The charge has been made by former Magistrate A. D. Brandon that hundreds of illegal resorts and rackets are operated in Pittsburgh under the protection of the Kline regime. There is widespread suspicion of grafting. Corruption of that sort would be bad enough; but to have officials fatten at the expense of taxpayers in other ways, also, makes an intolerable situation. There is grafting in other American cities, but their tax burden is at least not so onerous as that of Pittsburgh.

Apropos of grafting, it would be interesting to see the income tax returns filed by some of our public officials. Former Magistrate Orie beat the rum conspiracy charges, but was sentenced to prison on income tax charges. The same thing has occurred in so many other cities that the suggestion has been seriously made that the best way to proceed against racketeers and corrupt public officials is to examine their bank accounts and then, if the evidence warrants it, prosecute them for making fraudulent income tax returns.

Prosecution of racketeers on income tax charges has been made possible by the fact that it is contrary to human nature for people to confess ill-gotten gains even if assured the information will be held in confidence. To ask a corrupt public official to disclose to the federal government under oath the receipt of bribes and other illegal income is too much.

Nevertheless some of the corrupt officials, as- sured that their income tax returns will be kept secret and that the information disclosed will not be used against them in criminal proceedings, may think it better to file truthful returns and take the risk of being prosecuted for grafting rather than take the risk of being prosecuted for filing dishonest returns.

Testimony given before the House committee in- vestigating the public utilities suggests that some of these companies, with the assent of the Public Service Commission, are mulcting the people of Pittsburgh almost as shamelessly as the city administration. In return for the rights and privileges given the public utilities by the state, the least they could do would be to give the people good service at a fair rate. A fair rate has been described as one that would allow the companies a return of 7 per cent on their investment. Yet two local companies are reported to have earned more than 10 per cent.

Restored by Depression

Dying Commercial Paper Industry Revived Through Changes in Money Market.

Hard times revived one decadent industry—the commercial paper market in Wall street.

After nine years of decline, it staged a remarkable comeback in 1930 as money rates fell to the lowest level since the war.

The reason for the revival lay in the fact that banks were delinquent in passing along to cusomers decreases in interest rates.

Accordingly, borrowers enjoying high credit moved outside their own banks to the open money market, where dealers offered funds on better terms.

As a result, commercial paper outstanding through the principal houses rose from about $265,000,000 in 1929, when the industry was waning, to $553,000,000 in the spring of 1930.

The change does not mean that business enterprises stopped using bank credit; it merely signifies that borrowers showed up at another window.

Users of bank credit naturally took advantage of the cheapest market.

The lesson of the readjustment for non-bankers as well as bankers is that attempts to resist market tendencies result in a loss of business.

Banks attempted to keep their rates up on direct customer loans partly because they had difficulty in reducing the rates which they paid to depositors on current balances.

Furthermore, customer rates fluctuate less violently than open market rates. The former depend largely on personal relationships.

Accordingly, in a period of high money rates before the panic, borrowers with credit avoided the open market for commercial paper where the highest interest rates were demanded. That market, which had about $1,296,000,000 in paper outstanding in 1920, shrank to 20 per cent of that figure in 1929.

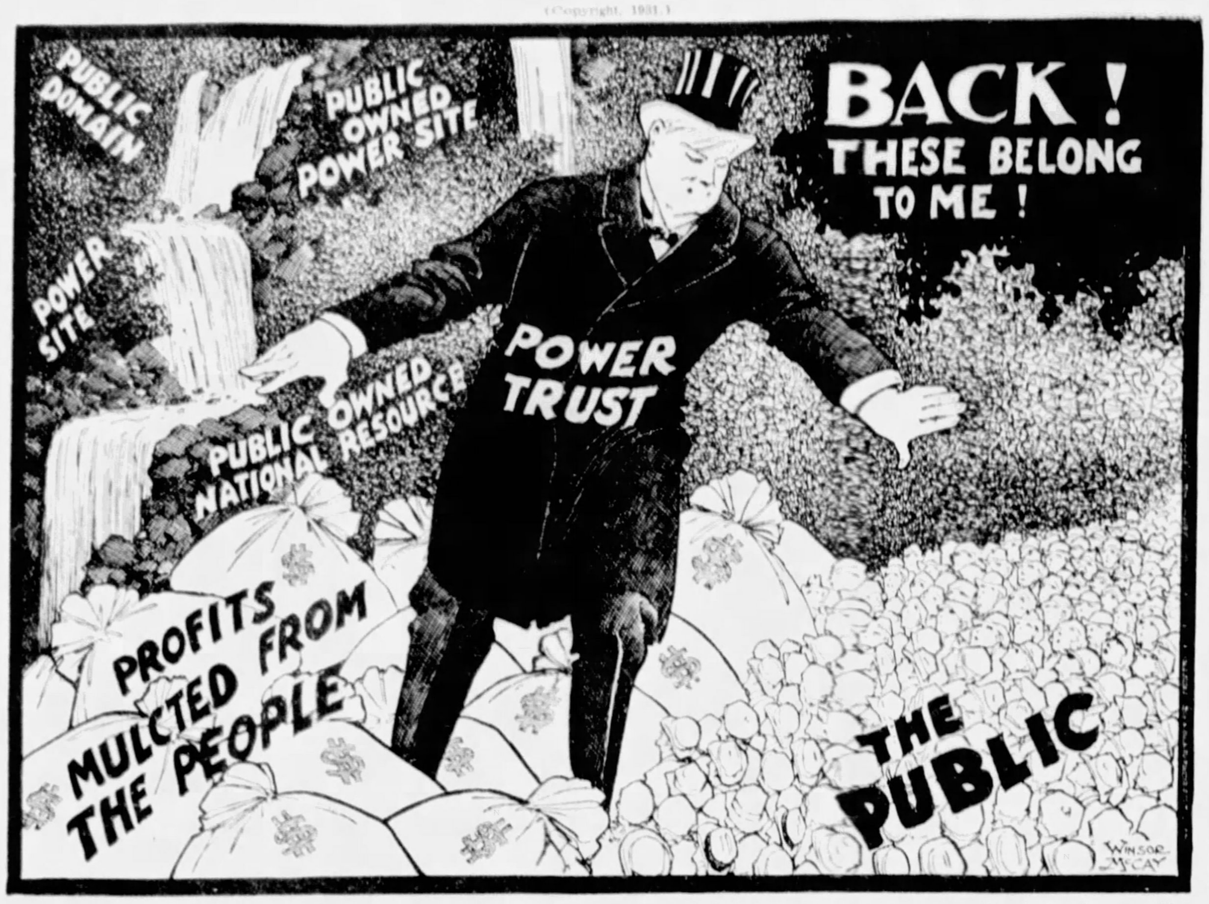
After the panic, however, rates in the open market dropped below those charged directly by the banks for customer loans.

Thus, a reversal of trend followed. A market was rebuilt on the basis of depression.

The banks still supply the funds, but through a different window. They purchase open market commercial paper to a larger extent, and lend directly to customers to a lesser extent.

Business men returned to a neglected channel for tapping the reservoir of cheap money and, as soon as confidence revives, the fact that money is on the bargain counter will stimulate constructive activity.

And He Really Thinks That They Do!



(Copyright, 1931.)

The Power Trust, mightiest of predatory interests, is up to its old tricks again.

It wants to grab FOR ITS OWN ENRICHMENT and at the EXPENSE OF THE PEOPLE all the God-given natural resources that abound in the land.

It seeks from the Federal Power Commission, THAT IT CONTROLS, a restriction-free power site on the New River, near Radford, Va.

The Federal Government has spent $115,000 and the State of Virginia $50,000 to make the New River navigable.

The Federal Government has NO jurisdiction over non-navigable streams. Virginia has relinquished all jurisdiction in the case.

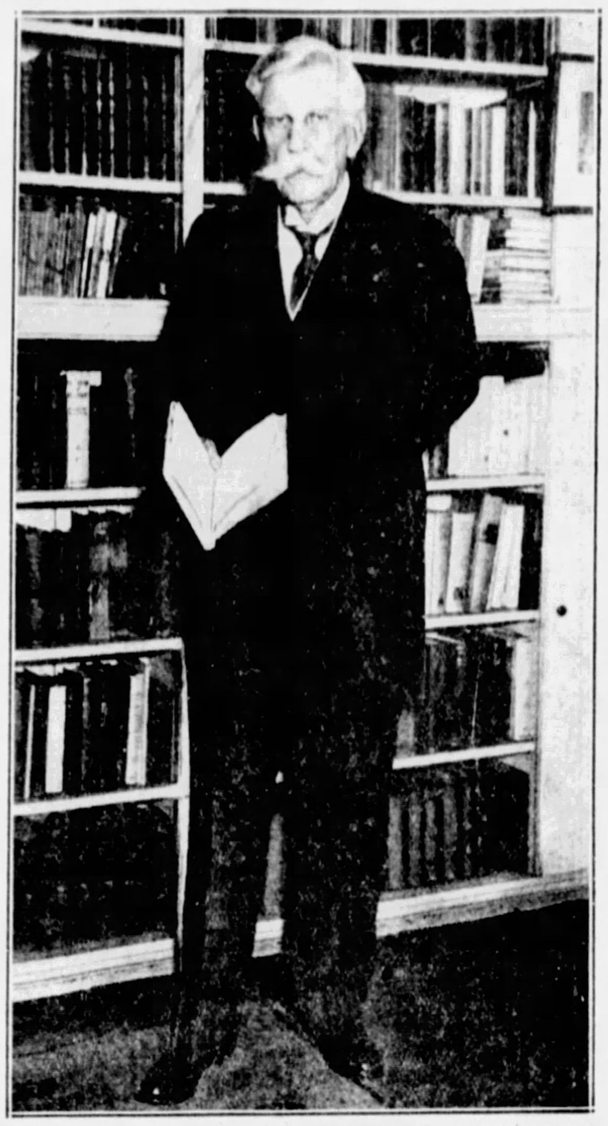
So the legal luminaries of the Power Trust want the Power Commission to rule that the New River is "non-navigable."

If it should, the Federal Government would have NO CONTROL over the BOOKS, RATES or OPERATIONS of the Power Trust subsidiary operating the power plant.

This bold attempt to break down the Federal Water Power act is only a forerunner of future Power Trust GRABS ON THE PUBLIC DOMAIN, if the trust is successful.

Truly 'A Grand Old Man'

An Example to All Americans.



ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, AGED 90 ON MARCH 8TH.

This man, son of the famous writer, Oliver Wendell Holmes, is worthy of his father, his mother, and his country.

He is serving now as an Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, having passed his ninetieth birthday.

His mind and will are clear and firm.

Every lawyer of intelligence admires the absolute justice of his decisions, and his knowledge of the Constitution which was made for MEN, not for CORPORATIONS.

Justice Holmes is included among the small number of men that, having achieved fame and done useful work, have continued both past threescore and ten, and past FOURSCORE AND TEN.

You can count on your fingers those that could be compared with Justice Holmes in physical vigor and intellectual power in old age.

Gladstone was gone at a younger age, although powerful when past 80.

The great German soldier, Von Moltke, born a Dane, was as straight as an arrow, able to command at 90.

And Pope Leo, celebrating his jubilee after 90, was a man of undiminished power mentally, although frail physically, his pale face transparent as thinnest porcelain.

You see power in the eye and the whole expression of this great American judge and GREAT AMERICAN LIBERAL.

His Supreme Court decisions are called "radical" by those who feel that the Constitution of the United States was made only for the protection of great fortunes.

Justice Holmes believes that the Constitution was made for the protection of human beings, as well as of property, and he so interprets it.

To get an idea of what it means to be 90 years old and to retain at that age the strength that Justice Holmes possesses think of the old soldiers that you have seen tottering in Grand Army processions—men that were in the Civil War. There are only a few of them left and they are nearly all feeble.

The United States Supreme Court Justice who stands above was also in that Civil War. He left Harvard University to enlist and brought back with him from the war three bullets that he still carries in his body.

Here is a man for all to admire, and for the young to take as an example.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND.

X-Raying Marriage.

When you meet a woman hurrying along with a tragic set expression on her face, these days, you never can be sure whether she is on her way to the dentist's or the divorce-lawyer's.

Our teeth and matrimony are being blamed for most of our ills.

A woman usually arrives at the cross-roads with her husband and with her teeth at about the same time in life. She is torn with doubt as to whether to get rid of them both before they give her any more pain and annoyance, or to try to hang onto them a little longer. It's a problem.

Parting with a husband, like parting with a tooth, is not always the perfect panacea it is supposed to be. The old ones may give us lots of trouble; but the new ones, after all, are purely matters of speculation and experiment. We may never get accustomed to them! Or learn how to manage them.

Besides, it is so often just a case of exchanging a tooth or a husband which gives you no peace of mind, and is always grumbling, for a makeshift which gives you no service and is always skidding.

* * *

That's why a normal woman will try anything, from dieting to faith cure, to hold onto ANY kind of tooth—or husband. She may consult her dentist or her lawyer; but she usually puts things off and thinks matters over for months or years before she does anything radical.

Divorce and tooth-pulling are such expensive and nerve-wrecking processes to face; and even a bad tooth or an unsatisfactory husband can be cruelly missed.

Besides, the void is horribly noticeable and attracts so much attention, sympathy and curiosity. An appendix, a rib or a tonsil may be dispensed with in comparative privacy; but losing a tooth or a husband is a matter of public interest and concern. There is no hiding the fact!

All your friends want to know how, when or why you got rid of it—or him—and if you are seriously considering replacing the loss. It hurts a woman's vanity dreadfully, and is an awful strain on her inventiveness and ingenuity. It is so hard to "explain!"

* * *

An honest lawyer or a good dentist will always advise a woman to hang onto the current husband or the original tooth, if he—or it—is good, solid and dependable; to patch things up and "forget it."

* * *

Because even a fairly good husband or fairly good tooth seems to be better than any substitute that has yet been found—and far more becoming than a porcelain smile and a gigolo.

Pasteur's Conquest of Hydrophobia

By Archibald Henderson

It is not clearly understood even to this day, why Pasteur was influenced to turn his attention to the study of hydrophobia. Perhaps the terrifying memories of his childhood, the blood-curdling cries of people bitten by a mad wolf at Arbois, may have inspired him with the hope of accomplishing a truly heroic task for the betterment of mankind. Perhaps he saw himself as the deliverer of the human race from this paralyzing fear, this ghastly suffering, this as yet uncurable malady.

The story of Pasteur's long search, aided by his patient and skilled assistants, for the microbe of rabies, and the efforts to discover the means to cure the disease, is one of the most extraordinary and impressive in the history of science. They could not discover the microbe of hydrophobia; it has not yet been discovered. They were not able to make pure cultures of it in bowls of soup. They had, however, to find some why to grow it.

Hundreds of experiments were conducted over a series of years. Unfortunately they were stumbling in the dark; for there was no record in history of a man or beast recovering from hydrophobia, once the germ had penetrated the brain and the spinal cord. But meantime they had learned how to cultivate the virus in a rabbit's brain. And a dog, inoculated with this virus, first came down with the disease; and, after a short time, showed a marked recovery. Next they shot the deadly virus directly into the brain of the dog, which had showed such marked improvements. Instead of succumbing, the dog actually recovered.

Pasteur felt that at least there was an excellent chance of accomplishing his great task. For he had shown, in this instance at least, that with a beast, which has had rabies and then recovers from it, there will be no recurrence. The problem then was to secure a weakened virus, which they might use for inoculating well animals, to give them a mild case of the disease. At last they discovered a way of weakening the terrible virus, by taking out a little section of the spinal cord of a rabbit dead of rabies, and hanging it up to dry in a germ-proof bottle for 14 days.

Each day they inoculated dogs with weakened virus, for 14 days—the virus being slightly stronger for each successive day. The dogs remained unharmed; but were they immune? To put the matter to a final test, Pasteur and his assistants inoculated four dogs, two vaccinated and two unvaccinated. A heavy dose of the most deadly virus was shot into the brains of all four. The unvaccinated dogs died, the vaccinated dogs recovered.

The problem was solved. The solution was to give the doses of vaccine to people who had been bitten by mad dogs. It is one of the supreme triumphs of science.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

What's the matter with this generation of American workers? Or is anything the matter with them?

Recently we gave an American boss's—a garage operator—opinion of our young American workers. It wasn't a flattering opinion. He agreed they were bright—but he accused them of carelessness, lack of interest in their jobs . . . said they "acted as if they were doing you a favor by working at all" . . . compared them unfavorably with the carefully trained, serious worker of foreign birth.

We printed his opinion—wondering. Didn't have to wonder long. Back came answers—literally by the bushel. Pleased answers. Peeved answers. Answers suggesting medals. Answers demanding our scalp. Our scalp is still on and we're still doing some but thinking under it. All this fuss—just what is the truth?

Thousands of boys out of work today. Are they all out of work because we had a market crash—or a jam in our foreign markets—or over production?

Or are many out of jobs because they've wished themselves out of jobs. . . Because they don't have the right feeling about jobs . . . Because they won't do their share if given a chance?

Here today are three of those thousands of answers which have set us thinking. They're Big News. Read them. Tell us what you think.

Ladies first. "Miss L. S." a working girl, doesn't agree with that American boss. Doesn't believe that the average young American worker is careless or indifferent. And declares that if he gets that way it's the boss's fault.

Dear Miss Robinson—

You've given the boss's viewpoint of the worker. How about the worker's viewpoint of the boss. I have worked for many years successfully and I think I am competent to give the other side of the question. The old saying goes—"a new broom sweeps clean." The broom will always sweep clean until worn out if you treat it right.

Most employers think of their help as servants or slaves, forgetting that they are human. You do your best to prove that you are worthy and reliable and what happens? The first year you get a raise or two and a little respect and praise. After that, you have to ask for your raise. And day by day they become more domineering and expect six times as much work in the same amount of hours. They bark at you, unnerve you, spoil your disposition, make you lose your respect for them. No matter how well your work is done, no appreciation is shown. You become reckless and don't give a darn. The next one who employs you suffers. Whose fault is it?

Nine times out of ten the most careless worker has, at one time, been the most efficient and conscientious but found that it wasn't appreciated.

MISS L. S.

"Ben Franklin" admits that the young worker may not be over enthusiastic but thinks it is because the boy is "only a greasy cogwheel in an unfeeling machine, unhonored and unsung."

"Consider," says he, "the garage in which that careless young man worked. It was large, well equipped, thoroughly modern. Which means that it was one huge machine, probably part of a chain—a money producing machine in which human feeling counts for practically nothing.

"Can the young man take pride in his work, such pride as his father took in his one-man job? Who tells him how good he is? Who glories with him over a beautiful piece of work, well done? Nobody. His immediate boss is probably as much a part of the machine as he is. Nobody has any personal interest or pride in anything. Modern science and business have taken both romance and conscience out of industry.

"Naturally the young man has a mechanical, cold feeling toward a place where he is only a greasy cog, when unhonored and unsung. No wonder he wants to rush away into a world of youth that is still warm and foolish and interested in him as a person.

"Put the average youngster of 20 in a little garage, in sight of a cottage surrounded by a garden and managed by the Maybelle of his heart, give him a chance to buy, some day, the business where he works, and will he kick a stray wrench from his path in his hurry to escape at 5 o'clock? I doubt it."

BEN FRANKLIN,
Valley, Neb.

But M. Stoffels, Holland born and Holland trained, in the good old ways, thinks it isn't the fault of the boss, nor of the machine, but of the worker, himself, and the parents who raised him.

"Dear Elsie Robinson:

"I read your article about the young man who kicked the wrench under the machine at the sound of the 5 o'clock gong. Being a machinist myself, I began thinking. I am a Hollander. I have been but five years in this country, but I have done much noticing. And it is true that most of the young men one meets are not interested in their jobs. They work because they have to, but they do so without pride in it. They are careless in their work.

"In my country? The boys are eager to learn a trade. They love the trade for its own sake, not just for the money they can earn in it. They are humble and respectful because their parents have trained them to be that way. They listen eagerly to the older trained men in the shop and try to learn. They are willing to wait and work hard for their advancement.

"In America, which is an impatient country, the boys want to be big men right away. They have no respect for older men or older ways. I think it is the fault of the parents, who give them too much freedom, and no discipline.

"M. STOFFELS,
"Brooklyn, N. Y."

Three views. Well—what's your opinion? Is it the boss's fault? The machine's fault? Or the fault of the worker himself?

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 14.—Purely personal piffle: Nobody on the stage has ever made me laugh like Frank Tinney in his old black-face vaudeville act. I took three xylophone lessons. Black and white mosaic floors make me dizzy. And I once grew violently seasick riding a camel.

Riding on trains, the wheels seem to say: "The bear ran over the mountain." Joan Crawford has the most come-hither-ish-eyes of the movie folk. I do not go into ecstasies over Libby Holman's singing. Every slim girl in an airplane cap looks like Amelia Earhart.

The first actress interviewed was Rose Melville, the original "Sis Hopkins." I was in love with her for a week afterward. Montague Glass tells the best of the Jewish dialect stories. My favorite march is Sousa's "On to Victory." Blood-red finger nail polish makes me creepy.

John Ringling has the most perfect memory I know. The first bottle of wine—a pint of Cliquot—ever bought was in the Midland Hotel in Kansas City. I tipped the waiter 15 cents and on way to a depot had my pocket picked of a $6 watch. No coffee touches Lindy's on Broadway.

I drove to my wedding in Newport, Ky., in a rubber-tired hack, nervously chewing gum. The first job in New York lasted three weeks. It took five months to get another at less than half the salary. In six months the blue envelope. And in desperation turned to this. Heigh ho!

The first story sold was, ironically enough, to a magazine called Success. And the check has never arrived. I once went to the Evening World at 5 a. m. to wait for the late Charles Chapin and ask for a job. And despite the legends, never received more kindly treatment. But didn't get the job.

The odor of dead roses inspires a fit of blues. I like to answer letters with hand-written post cards. Back stage watching a performance, Richard Mansfield thundered: "What are you doing here?" In trying to get away I walked across the corner of the stage. Before all those people.

Articles about life in Africa or the Far North fascinate. One of the best remembered detective stories is "File 113." If I had a son I would name him Jay. I never fail to jump at the ring of the telephone. Story tellers who interject, "Have you heard it?" infuriate, but I do it myself. Writing in the first person this way usually brings about a half-dozen mean-tempered "Sez you!" letters. But the majority write it amuses them. And that's the sole effort of this twaddle.

The saddest and most memorable disappointments were during school days. No newspaper or magazine ever asked me to "color" my stuff to blend with their policy. I have always wanted to muss Vincent Lopez's hair. Recently I said I'd like to visit Norfolk, Va., and received more than 300 invitations. But someone wrote: "Be sure to come, but don't expect to go back."
